House Votes Bill to Forbid Slot Machine Shipments

Johnson to Request Senate Acceptance Of Changes; Measure Reenacts D. C. Ban

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The House yesterday passed the bill to ban interstate shipment of slot machines and pay-off pinball machines.

The measure, approved in somewhat broader form by the Senate last April, sailed through the House on a voice vote. A standing vote of 116 to 10 killed a move to send the bill to committee.

Some members expressed doubt that the bill would smash the reputed three-billion-dollar-a-year one-armed bandit racket. But, as Representative Boyd Tackett (D., Ark.) put it, they all voted "against sin."

Chairman Johnson (D., Colo.) of the Senate Commerce Committee, has said he would ask the Senate to accept the House version. If that is done, the measure should reach the White House shortly where President Truman's signature is expected.

Inclues Ban on Parts

The bill, as passed by the House, is limited to the one-armed bandits, pay-off pinballs and subassemblies or essential parts of either.

The bill forbids shipment in interstate commerce of the machines under penalty of up to $5000 fine and up to two years in jail. Exceptions are made for shipments into states where the gambling devices are legal, such as Nevada with state-wide approval and Maryland where four counties have them under local option.

But in such cases each of these State Legislatures must now enact new legislation to provide for that State's exemption. The bill does not affect any machines now in use legally since that is a matter of State law. But no new machines or parts for old ones could be brought into Nevada or Charles, Anne Arundel, Calvert or St. Mary's counties in Maryland, without a new State law in each case.

The bill also reenacts a present law forbidding slots in the District. It also forbids them on Federal property, thus giving the force of law to the generally unobserved service regulations against the one-armed bandits on Army posts and on Naval stations.

Officer Club Exemption Fails

Senator Owen Brewster's wires were tapped while he headed the Senate War Investigating Committee in 1947, according to testimony given to the current Senate wire-tap probe committee by Lieut. Joseph W. Shimon of the Metropolitan Police.

Shimon said he found the tap while shadowing a man named "Chick" Lappin — a Washington man he said he had known to be a procuror of women in a celebrated Washington shakedown case, a man he will meet again today in the wire-tap hearing room. The hearing goes on at 10 a. m. in room 457 of the Senate Office Building.

Shimon said he trailed Lappin on complaint of Senator Brewster that Lappin was shadowing Brewster.

Brewster—the Maine Republican who heads the GOP Senatorial Campaign Committee — emerged early in the current investigation as a major target of the District Committee's inquiry into Shimon's

Four Transit Firm Officials Given Raises

Three Are Associates Of Louis E. Wolfson; Firm Challenges Pepco

At least four Capital Transit Co. executives have had their salaries "adjusted" upward recently, although exact amounts of the changes have not been disclosed.

Official confirmation of "adjustments" in pay for some executives came yesterday from transit Vice President E. C. Giddings, who added that the amount of the changes was a "question of personal concern to those affected."

From other sources within the firm, however, it was learned that three of the four known changes came to associates of Louis E. Wolfson, who has a controling interest in the CTC board.

One of these, J. A. B. Broadwater, a company vice president and chairman of the Executive Committee, joined the company last October at a $5000 salary. Since then he has been elected executive vice president and recently got a substantial pay increase "in line with his executive duties" with the transit company. Amount of this increase was not divulged.

Two Others Raised

Two other Wolfson men, Jack Surasky and Doran S. Weinstein, also have had their pay status changed since they joined the firm last October.

Surasky, serving as special assistant to the vice president, took no salary until January of this year, when he began receiving a "very moderate salary." He recently had this figure adjusted upward to an unstated level.

Weinstein, who began as special assistant to the president, served from October, 1949 to May, 1950 also at a "very modest pay." In May he was named vice president and secretary and given a salary "commensurate with the job." His salary has not been adjusted since.

A fourth-known recipient of a salary adjustment is Giddings, whose salary was boosted ten percent in line with the salaried workers pay hike last fall. He is in charge of public relations.

Baruch's Plans On Inflation Hit by CED

Business Group Favors Higher Taxes Over Controls Proposals

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Committee for Economic Development declared yesterday that for the present there are better ways than all-out wage and price controls to prevent inflation.

Rather, the CED said, what is urgently needed to stop excessive price rises from the expanded defense program are much heavier taxes, restriction of easy credit, economy in Government and a vigorous savings bond campaign.

The views of the progressive businessmens' and industrial leaders' organization were made known in a special report of its Program Committee, entitled "Economic Policy for Rearmament."

Against Baruch

In general, the private business group came up with recommendations closely paralleling those of President Truman himself and his Council of Economic Advisers. Though it did not mention him by name, the report was completely at odds with the cardinal recommendation of Bernard M. Baruch. He has pressed for the imposition of over-all, general price and wage freezes, plus rationing to consumers.

The controversy between the advocates of across-the-boards, immediate and rigid wage price controls, and those who favor giving the President permissive authority to fix wage and price ceilings on a selective basis continued yesterday in Congress.

Senate-House conferees on the Defense Production Act labored on the issue yesterday without visible progress. The dispute appears to be mainly on party lines, with Democrats in both chambers favoring permissive, selective controls, and Republicans urging a provision that would make the President control virtually all wages and prices if he wanted to control any.

War II Cited

The CED report argued that the size of the present problem was not comparable to that at the outbreak of World War II. Then, military expenditures rose to a

2 D. C. Men Among 70 Injured As B&O Trains Crash Head-On

Two Washington men were among at least 70 persons injured in the head-on collision of two Baltimore and Ohio Railroad trains near Connellsville, Pa., yesterday.

Hospitalized with possible broken ribs was David M. Tice, 63, of 804 Fern pl. nw., a Railway Postal Service employe at work on the Jersey City-bound mail train due to pass through Washington at 11 p. m. last night.

Treated for face lacerations and released was Walter J. Bachman, 62, of 62 U st. nw., a Government Printing Office employe who, with his wife Leah, was heading for a vacation in Pittsburgh.

No one was killed in the wreck and only 13 persons were detained at Connellsville State Hospital. The two trains, switched to the same track because of a disabled freight, came together at "moderate speed," officials said.

He said the passenger train evidently had been given permission to proceed on the wrong track. B. & O. officials ordered an immediate investigation to determine who was responsible.

The passenger train, originating at Baltimore and heading for Cleveland, left Washington at 10:05 a. m. (DST). Both locomotives and one car of the seven-car mail train were derailed.

Most seriously injured was Caleb H. Allen of Hydman, Pa., engineer of one of the trains who suffered severe shock and undetermined other injuries.

Loan for Franco Retained Despite Truman's Stand; Point Four Wins

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Congress yesterday handed President Truman a $36,153,490,000 appropriation bill to pay the regular costs of Government for a year and left in it a $62,500,000 loan to Spain.

But the veto cloud that has hung over the big measure ever since the Franco rider was approved subsided as the bill went to the White House.

Senate Administration sources suggested the White House has found a way around a veto. Confirming reports that Mr. Truman may simply impound the sum voted Spain, one informant noted that the rider does not specify "when" the loan must be made.

Congress meanwhile resolved two other major White House objections to the first omnibus money bill in modern times by (1) providing the full $26,900,000 Mr. Truman asked for his Point Four program and (2) permitting the Budget Bureau to decide where a 550 million dollar over-all cut should be made.

The vast single package funds measure cleared the Senate after three hours of debate, but one item in dispute with the House held up final passage until later in the day.

"Watch Dog" Item Settled

The Senate insisted on an item of $110,000 to permit a special Senate subcommittee to take over the work of the House-Senate "Watch Dog" committee on foreign economic cooperation. The House finally "accepted" the item, and the bill was whisked to the White House.

The old joint "Watch Dog" committee, headed by Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.) is slated to expire September 1. The $110,000 item was added after a closed meeting of the Senate Appropriations Committee decided to continue the check on ECA spending through a subcommittee still to be named.

As sent to the White House the big bill carries a $13,294,229,443 cash outlay for defense, $4,375,473,729 in new money for foreign aid on a strictly pre-Korean war basis and funds to run all of the agencies of Government another year.

Korean emergency funds are being handled in a separate $16,771,000,000 bill which passed the House Saturday and now is pending in the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Items Displease Truman

Besides the Spanish loan, there are a number of things in the big omnibus measure that the President does not like, but leaders think they would hardly provide a prop for a veto.

For example the bill cuts back Marshall Plan funds to $2,250,000,000, which is 200 million dollars under the Administration request. But a $276,761,473 carry-over will help tide ECA through the year.

The full amount for undeveloped areas of the world (Point Four) was restored in a House turnabout last week.

U. S. Guns Spark 3-Mile Advance By So. Koreans; British Arrive

Tokyo (Tuesday), Aug. 29 (AP).—Supported by American guns, South Korean infantrymen surged back on the bitterly contested east coast and recaptured Kigye from the Communists, field dispatches reported today.

The return to Kigye represents a three-mile advance for the Republican troops. And they continued to push northward against "light resistance," these reports said.

On their right flank, other South Koreans stood firm against two other prongs of the Reds' surprisingly strong weekend attack against the eastern anchor of the United Nations' defense line. With American warships and planes hammering at Communist spearheads, the Republicans held their positions around Pohang, No. 2 U. N. port in Korea, 9 miles southeast of Kigye.

Some Red Infiltration

An American spokesman said the South Korean positions, were four miles north and west of the city.

Reds infiltrated South Korean lines during the night, the spokesman said, and about a platoon penetrated on the road south of Pohang. Republican troops were attacking this group at the time the spokesman made his report and expected to wipe them out by nightfall.

The United States Navy said guns of its warships were supplying round-the-clock support for the defenders of Pohang with "excellent" results.

At the opposite end of the 120-mile defense line Reds were beaten back in fierce hand-to-hand fighting with American infantrymen, Eighth Army headquarters said.

Reds hurled three successive attacks early today at United States Negro troops atop Battle Mountain, dominating the south coastal plain before Masan, which guards the road to Pusan, the key United Nations supply port.

Bitter Fighting Under Way

Associated Press Correspondent Stan Swinton reported bitter close-in fighting was still under way at 8 a. m. (5 p. m., Monday, EST), two hours after the Communists started their third and heaviest attack of the day. Battle Mountain has changed hands six times in two weeks.

Pohang has changed hands twice. Associated Press Correspondent Hal Boyle reported the Reds pushed to within two and a half miles in their drive to recapture the port.

Boyle said armor-supported American infantry moved up to backstop the South Koreans, some of whom have been on the battle lines for two solid months.

A cruiser and two destroyers raked the Communist spearhead approaching the port. Artillery guarding the United States airstrip, 6 miles southeast of Pohang, which the Reds almost seized earlier this month, rolled out to shell the North Koreans while fighter bombers made re-

Lee Pressman admitted yesterday that he did not make a complete ideological break with communism until after the North Korean Reds attacked South Korea.

The former general counsel of the CIO reiterated that he abandoned his Communist Party membership in 1935, but he conceded that he "met with" and "dealt with" Communist leaders long after that time.

But at no time, he insisted in his testimony before the House Un-American Activities Committee, did he permit Communist leaders to influence his actions within the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

He did not tell Philip Murray, president of the CIO, that he had been a Communist, said Pressman, and no CIO official ever asked him about his Communist affiliations.

Pressman insisted that he has now made a "complete break" with communistic theory, and he equally

Malik Puts Formosa on U. N. Agenda

Security Council Faces Bitter Fight Today on New Issue's Injection

Lake Success, Aug. 28 (AP).—Russia's Jakob A. Malik today called a meeting of the Security Council for tomorrow afternoon and directed that the Formosan question be added to the Council's work sheet.

Previously the only issue formally before the 11-nation body was the Korean conflict. The United States has insisted that it would welcome consideration of the Formosan problem but that the Korean issue must not be shunted aside.

The council will meet at 2 p. m. (EST).

The Formosan issue first was injected into the debate Friday when Malik, as August president, had a message from Chou En-Lai, foreign minister of Communist China, read into the record charging the United States with aggression. The United States countered with a long denial and a statement that the American Government would welcome a United Nations inquiry either here or on the spot.

Malik has power as president to place any item on the provisional agenda, but the Council itself must decide whether it will agree to discuss Formosa and, if so, whether such discussions will have priority over the Korean issue.

A member of the American delegation said the United States would not take an active part in fighting to keep the charges off the agenda. He added, however, that other members of the Council were determined to keep the Formosan issue off because it would get tangled up with the Korean question.

The Council has insisted that the Korean question has priority and a United States statement last Friday reiterated that. If Malik cannot get six countries to support him on placing the Formosa item on the agenda, his fight fails.

The United States member said that if the Formosan question does get on the agenda, there probably would be alternate Council sessions on Korea and on Formosa, and representatives of Red China would have to be admitted to the Formosan discussion as an interested party.

Korea, China Major Issues In GOP Drive

National Committee's 56-Page Document Puts Onus on Democrats

The Republican National Committee made it clear yesterday that it intended to use China and Korea as the major issues in the 1950 campaign.

It tossed into the election hopper a 56-page document on the Far East "for the information of the public, and for the use of Republican candidates and workers in the campaign to elect the Eighty-second Congress."

Position: We Told You So

Made up of texts and excerpts of congressional and other public statements, going back to the Yalta conference and beyond, the committee's document said to the voters, in effect, "we told you so."

The documents attempted to show that the Republicans had been right, and the Democrats wrong, in their estimates of the Chinese and Korean situations.

"It is the American way to give the people the facts," said Guy G. Gabrielson, chairman of the national committee, in a brief foreword. "Unless they have the facts, their franchise is useless"

The "background" document did not center its fire on Secretaries Acheson and Johnson; it threw in quotations from these Republican targets and from dozens of others in the Administration, from President Truman down, who could be shown to have guessed wrong on the course of events in the Far East.

Likewise it did not play up any single Republican as the party's prophet, although Representatives Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.) and Paul W. Shafer (R., Mich.) and Senators William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) and H. Alexander Smith (R., N. J.) were quoted persistently. Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) did not earn a single quotation.

The document explained that Republicans had opposed economic aid to Korea this year and last year because they felt it would be useless without military aid.

It cited faulty estimates by military men as well as Administration leaders, and warnings from Republcans against withdrawal from Korea.

President Alone Will Make Policy, General Informed In VFW Incident

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday reasserted his constitutional role as the architect of United States foreign policy, and in effect told Gen. Douglas MacArthur to stay out of that field.

The resounding clash between the Chief Executive and the 5-star Far East Commander, which threatened to figure in the 1950 political campaign, was brought into the open by the White House.

Press Secretary Charles G. Ross called an early news conference and confirmed something that already was widely known—that Mr. Truman on Saturday directed General MacArthur to withdraw a statement on Formosa he had sent to the encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Chicago for release yesterday.

Said Ross:

"In order to avoid confusion as to the United States position with respect to Formosa, the President directed that the statement prepared by General MacArthur on this subject be withdrawn."

Statements Made Public

The White House made public Mr. Truman's various statements with regard to Formosa, including a wrap-up letter he wrote to United Nations Ambassador Warren Austin over the weekend, and pointed out that obviously these statements had to stand as the official policy of the United States.

The White House further stated:

"In the field of foreign relations, there can be but one voice. The President's policy must stand as the official policy of the United States."

This amounted to a rebuke to General MacArthur and a reminder that he was to stay out of the foreign-policy domain of the Chief Executive. It also was intended as a warning to any others who might be tempted to get out of line.

"Will the President relieve General MacArthur?" a reporter asked Press Secretary Ross.

"The President regards this incident as closed," Ross said.

Sec. Matthews to Remain

Ross, in reply to another question, said that Secretary of the Navy Matthews would remain in the Government. Matthews made a speech in Boston last week saying that the United States should be prepared to institute a war if necessary to compel other nations to cooperate for peace. The State Department, with an assist from the White House, disavowed the speech.

Although the White House regarded the MacArthur incident as closed, there were indications that

Chinese Red Army Reported Massed In North Korea

Taipei, Formosa, Aug. 28 (AP).—The Nationalist Chinese Defense Ministry asserted today that 270,000 Chinese Communist troops, including three Russian-equipped armies, are massing in North Korea and across the border in Manchuria to help the Korean Reds.

The ministry said in a written statement it had been "definitely established" that the troops were on both sides of the Yalu River, which separates North Korea and Manchuria.

The statement said the Chinese Reds were assembling to join the Red Koreans in the fight against United Nations defenders of South Korea.

The fresh troops consist of eight armies, two cavalry divisions and one artillery division, the ministry said.

It asserted that three of the armies, equipped by the Russians and under leadership of Gen. Lin Piao, were "known to have crossed the Yalu River last month."

The Chinese Reds were reported to have constructed "permanent" defense works along the river.

The Nationalist Ministry said the Chinese Communists decided to send aid to the North Koreans at a Soviet-sponsored military conference last month in Peiping.

Civil Service Status Opened For Temporary U. S. Employes

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The President yesterday ordered between 40,000 and 50,000 temporary Federal workers made eligible for full Civil Service status.

An estimated 7000 employes who stand to benefit by the order are in this city.

In his order, the President laid down these conditions an employe must meet to win permanent Civil Service status:

1. He must now be in an "active-duty" status in a job subject to competitive Civil Service.

2. He must have served full-time and continuously for a minimum of two years without a break in service of more than 60 calender days. Military service, however, isn't regarded as a "break in service."

3. His most recent efficiency rating must be "good" or better, but if he isn't covered by a rating system, his agency head must certify to the Civil Service Commission that he served with "merit" for at least the past six months.

4. He must be recommended for status by his agency head within six months from the date of the order, which was yesterday, August 28, and finally:

5. He must pass a suitable non-competitive test to be given by Civil Service, and he will be given only one opportunity to pass it.

There are several exceptions to the order and they are:

An employe who is otherwise eligible and who is now on active military duty shall be considered as being in active-duty status, and he will be given his chance for full status when he's restored to his job.

The order doesn't apply to postmasters. Also, it won't apply to rural carriers in those cases where there is an existing register of eligibles, or where Civil Service has announced tests for filling rural carrier vacancies.

In addition, it won't cover non-veterans who are in jobs which are either by law or executive order restricted to veterans.

The order covers non-status persons in war service, temporary, and temporary indefinite classified jobs.

Jean Muir Fired From TV Cast Because of Alleged Red Links

New York, Aug. 28 (U.P.).—General Foods Corp. tonight fired Actress Jean Muir from its television show, "The Aldrich Family," because of protests that she had belonged to an alleged Communist-front organization.

Miss Muir said she couldn't understand why anyone would accuse her because she was bitterly anti-Communist.

The corporation, which sponsors the NBC show, said it was not passing judgment on the merits of the protests, but did not want to antagonize its consumers.

Miss Muir, blonde screen and radio star, was to have played the role of "Mother Aldrich" on the premier of the show last night.

"I not only deny that I am a Communist," she said in today's statement, "I feel so strongly against it I feel it is one of the most vicious influences in American life. It seems ironic that I who feel so strongly should be accused."

The protests against Miss Muir apparently stemmed from what she said was brief membership with the Congress of American Women two or three years ago. She said she resigned from it after six months "because I suspected it."

One of the persons who protested against her was Mrs. Hester McCullough, Greenwich, Conn., housewife recently sued for $200,000 libel for calling entertainers Larry Adler and Paul Draper pro-Communists.

Navy Revokes Cut In Annapolis Students

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

The Navy yesterday cancelled plans to cut the enrollment at the Naval Academy "in view of the current international situation."

Last May, the department announced that the number of congressional appointments to Annapolis would be reduced from five to four for each Senator and Representative and the appointments from the enlisted ranks and reserve would be proportionately slashed.

Overcrowding was the reason given for the cutback. Vice Admiral John W. Roper, chief of Naval personnel said yesterday that the existing doubling up of midshipmen at Bancroft Hall "must be accepted for the immediate future."

There will be 3700 Midshipmen at the Annapolis school with the entrance of the new class this fall.

Roper told The Washington Post there are no plans to ask for an expansion of facilities at the Academy, as many other things needed by the Navy have a greater priority. He said the question of cutting the number of appointments would be reconsidered next year in the light of world conditions then.

UMT Action Set Today

Meanwhile, the Senate Armed Services Committee postponed action until today on universal military training. The group has two measures before it—the regular bill submitted by the Department of Defense spelling out the program in detail and a committee version fixing the basic standards for the program but leaving the details to a UMT commission which would be named by the President under the plan.

Some members feel such a simpler bill might have a better chance of passage this late in the session. It would actually authorize UMT but legislation covering many points would have to be recommended by the commission and approved by Congress later.

While the committee is overwhelmingly in favor of the training program, some of the Senators feel there are ramifications of UMT which have not yet been fully worked out to their satisfaction. One is the assignment to Reserve units of young men who complete their six months training. What would be done with youth who live in isolated communities, they ask?

Would Provide 5,000,000 Men

Estimates before the group show that a full-scale UMT program would provide a pool of 5,000,000 trained young men between 18 and 26 years old. The annual cost of maintaining such a force in the National Guard or organized units might run as high as 5 billion dollars, it is said.

Other defense developments:

(1) The Army announced it would accept women physicians, dentists and allied specialists as Reserve officers for assignment to active duty. They'd come in under the same regulations governing male officers.

2. Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) announced that the House Armed Services Committee will investigate charges that some doctors have made large sums of money examining X-rays of draftees.

3. Maj. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, commander of the Military Air Transport Services, disclosed that the fleet of airplanes carrying supplies to Japan has been increased from 60 to 250 since the Korean war started and that close to 100 tons of "high priority" cargo is reaching the Far East daily via the Pacific airlift. Prior to the Korean fighting, the total was 70 tons a month.

During an early 40-day period, 1500 passengers and more than 1500 tons of cargo were carried across the Pacific. A total of 1303 casualties were flown to the United States during June, July and the first 17 days of August. The total for August is expected to reach 1100.

Kuter said some of the civilian airplanes now taking part in the airlift will be released September 15.

Senate Group Speeds Draft Of Doctors

The Senate Armed Services Committee yesterday approved unanimously a bill to draft doctors and dentists with first priority to those traned at government expense who have not yet served.

A similar bill was moving swiftly through the House Armed Services Committee with early approval virtually certain.

Chief difference between the two measures, as they stood yesterday, was that the House bill would deny to those medical men who waited to be drafted the $100 a month premium awarded those who volunteer. Under the Senate bill volunteers and drafted specialists would both get the added pay.

Another difference between the bills is that the Senate version would require registration of medical specialists through 55, while the House measure, as now written, would apply only to those through 45. Both bills would draft doctors, dentists and certain medical specialists to be drafted into the services as privates, whereas doctors and dentists who volunteer as such must be started in no lower grade than first lieutenant.

The frank purpose of the legislation, as expressed in hearings yesterday by House Committee members and by several witnesses, is to induce doctors and dentists to volunteer. It was not expected any actually would be drafted under its provisions.

Its hoped-for immediate effect would be to speed up voluntary induction of doctors and dentists, of whom Defense Department witnesses said 7666 would be needed by June 30. The same witnesses said at least 10,000 of the 31,000 young men given medical educations largely at Government expense had served very little or not at all and were not in any reserve component. It was hoped the draft would bring these into service before the armed forces have to call many more of their 40,000 reservists.

Dr. Richard Meiling, Defense Department director of medcial services, testified that 1195 reserve doctors and dentists already had been called to active duty. On the basis of an armed force of 2½ million men by June 30, 1951, he said 5024 doctors and 2642 dentists would be needed by the same date.

Under both bills, this priority of call to service is established as follows:

1. Those educated at Government expenses who served less than 90 days active duty in their professions.

2. Those who have had more than 90 days service but less than 21 months.

3. Those who had no military service at all since September, 1940.

4. All others, in the order of their length of service in World War II.

Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, in testimony before the House committee, revealed that very few men 19 to 26 had been drafted since the services' call for 100,000 men last month. He predicted, however, that 50,000 would be in training camps by October 1.

CED Favors Higher Taxes As Key to Halting Inflation peak of 90 billion dollars a year and there were 12 million men under arms.

Now, it appears that the present rate of military spending, of about 15 billion dollars, will be increased by only 15 to 20 billion more in the next 12 months. But meantime, our capacity to produce is 50 percent greater than in 1941.

Furthermore, we should be able to increase total production by almost the same percent as we are called on to increase military output. "Thus we can probably carry through the present program with little reduction in total over-all civilian supplies," the CED said.

The force for inflation, the report explained, is excessive demand, and therefore the key to prevention of runaway price rises is "adequate limitation of nonmilitary demand."

"Given this," the report said, "the problem becomes manageable. Without it, nothing else will suffice."

Proposed Methods

Therefore, the report argued, these are the methods that should be used to cut down that excessive civilian demand:

1. Cut Government expenditures for nonmilitary purposes to the minimum. From two to three billion dollars a year could be saved in this way.

2. Raise taxes. The initial request of the President for about five billion dollars of new revenue "seems roughly adequate as a first step." Another step of about the same amount and maybe more will be needed next spring.

3. Conduct a savings program to restrain consumers' demand for goods by reducing the amount of money they have available to spend.

4. Sell more Federal bonds outside the banking system. Selling them, as at present, mainly to banks, does not reduce the money supply, but creates possibilities for extension of more credit. A corollary may be a higher interest rate on the bonds, and hence higher costs to the Government. But the anti-inflationary effect would be more than worth it.

5. Restrict credit to cut down demands that are now financed by credit expansion—that is, consumers' heavy goods such as ranges, refrigerators, autos, etc., new housing, and business plant, equipment and inventories. The total of these expenditures is now 67 billon dollars a year, and much of it financed through credit.

Controls Hit for Now

The CED declared that price and wage controls and rationing "are not only unnecessary now, but would actually impede the Nation's efforts to build up its military force, prevent inflation and strengthen our economy.

"Over-all direct controls inevitably interfere with the process of production and distribution of goods. They reduce the flexibility and adaptability of the economy, weaken incentives, discourage attempts to increase supplies of scarce materials and interfere with the growth of productivity . . .

"If the military program were very much bigger than is now in sight, price, wage and rationing controls might be needed.

"The heaviest tax program . . . plus Government economy, plus credit controls and voluntary savings might not then be sufficient to restrain excess demand . . . But this is not our present position, and the possibility that it may be our future position does not require the adoption of such measures in the present program.

"In fact, the possibility that we may face a still greater emergency makes it all the more important not to put the American economy now in a strait-jacket that would prevent its growth."

Three Kinds of Taxes

The CED said that three kinds of taxes were needed, corporate income, individual income and excise taxes.

On the first named, the report stressed a series of practical difficulties with excess profits taxes on corporations, and asked for careful study before it was attempted. It urged, by implication at least, higher general corporate rates instead for the time being.

Chairman of the CED Program Committee that made the report was Meyer Kestnbaum, president of Hart Schaffner & Marx, Chicago.

At the Capitol, Senator Maybank (D., S. C.) told reporters that he would try to effect agreement of the conferees on the controls bill today He will offer a compromise section giving the President power to impose wage and controls on a selective basis, but requiring, as far as is feasible, the imposing of wage ceilings wherever price ceilings are set

Maybank argued before general freezes could be put into effect, the Administration would have to create a huge 40,000 to 50,000-man OPA organization, and appropriate 250 million dollars to run it.

Fruit Picker, 70, Shoots Suspected Job Competitor

Afraid another man was after his job, a 70-year-old Silver Spring laborer yesterday shot and wounded him with a shotgun, Montgomery County Police said.

Police charged John Henry Hall of Route 1, Silver Spring with assault with intent to kill. The victim, Preston J. Hyson, 43, who lives nearby, was wounded in the right arm and shoulder and taken to Montgomery County General Hospital.

According to police, Hyson came to pick apples on the Sinyard Farm where Hall works. The older man accused Hyson of trying to get his job away from him, grabbed a shotgun and fired at Hyson, police said.

Truman Signs Social Security Bill Into Law

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday signed into law a vast expansion of social security.

His action blankets 10 million more workers under old age insurance and increases benefits as much as 100 percent.

Also payroll taxes to finance it rise in 1951 when employes pay the present 1½ percent on an additional $600 of their wages for the year.

Although dissatisfied with one section of the bill, Mr. Truman nevertheless called the measure "an outstanding achievement." He made the comment in a statement which urged Congress to improve jobless insurance and protect disabled workers against wage losses.

Beginning October 1, retired workers now receiving benefits will get an average of $46 monthly, instead of the present $26. In this group are about three million persons, including survivors of insured workers. For persons yet to retire the new bill provides increases ranging up to 100 percent.

In extending coverage to 10,000,000 more persons, the bill will bring to about 45,000,000 the total number under the social security program.

The 10,000,000-person expansion includes 5,000,000 self-employed such as grocers, barbers, gas station operators; 1,000,000 domestic servants and 750,000 farm workers.

State, City Employes

Optional coverage is made available to about 1,400,000 State and city government employes, 60,000 employes of non-profit organizations, and 50,000 workers on publicly owned transit systems.

To help raise the money for the greater benefits, the new law will more than triple payroll taxes during the next 20 years. Such taxes this year total $2,500,000,000; in 1970 they will reach about $7,800,000,000.

"Expanded coverage and increased benefits in old age insurance," the President's statement said, "should now be matched by steps to strengthen our unemployment insurance system.

"At the same time, we urgently need a system of insurance against loss of wages through temporary or permanent disability.

"I shall continue to urge action on this unfinished business and I know that the committees of Congress are now preparing to give these matters serious consideration."

The section which Mr. Truman dislikes restricts the authority of the Secretary of Labor to withhold unemployment compensation funds from states which fail to come up to Federal standards.

"Very unfortunate," was Mr. Truman's description of the section. He said he hoped Congress would reconsider "this ill-advised provision."

But the bill as a whole, Mr. Truman stated, ultimately will reduce dependence on public charity by making it possible for more families to participate in the social security system.

Those taking prat in the program now may get the same benefits on retirement as those who have participated for the last 13 years, if they make a required payment.

Truman Greeting to AFGE Praises Government Workers

Omaha, Nebr., Aug. 28 (AP).—Federal Government workers heard praise from President Truman for their "hard work, loyalty and devotion to duty" as the American Federation of Government Employes (AFL) opened its twelfth convention here today.

The President's words were contained in a letter from the White House read at the opening convention session.

The letter, addressed to AFGE National President Henry C. Iler of Washington, D. C., said the President sent greetings to the Government employes "with a feeling of genuine gratitude."

Approximately 300 delegates from the United States, Alaska, the Canal Zone and Hawaii were expected to attend the convention, which will continue at least through Thursday.

A "vitally important legislative program," together with a heavy business schedule, may carry the convention into Friday, Iler said.

Government representatives who will attend the convention were to arrive by plane this afternoon. They included Donald S. Dawson, Administrative Assistant to the President; Ralph Wright, Assistant Secretary of Labor, and Michael Galvin, Undersecretary of Labor.

Dawson is to deliver a message from the White House Tuesday.

In his report prepared for today's convention session, AFGE President Iler said the Federal workers stand ready to "do our part in the vital task of preparing the country for any eventuality."

Iler was named August 2 to fill out the unexpired term of James G. Yaden, who died six weeks ago.

Iler said accomplishments of the AFGE include "an imposing list of improvements in the operation of the Federal Civil Service and much-needed benefits for the employes of the Government, which were conferred by legislative enactment as well as by administrative regulation and policy determination."

He called upon delegates to "strive to make the AFGE an even more powerful force for the welfare of Federal employes and for the advancement of the Federal Civic Service."

Iler said the AFGE must build its membership in order to assure the Congress and leaders of the Government's executive branch that it represents a large segment of Federal personnel.

Iler said progress has been made by employes of the Federal Government, but Federal workers "still cannot obtain the full measure of equity and justice of which they should be assured by reason of their employment in the public service."

Truman Asks Extra Funds for TVA Power

President Truman yesterday asked Congress to vote an additional $28,500,000 to step up Tennessee Valley facilities in the current emergency.

The money, a White House statement said, is needed to provide facilities to (1) meet increasing power requirements (2) furnish continuous power to existing aluminum, ferro alloy and other industries, and (3) expedite construction of transmission facilities to meet revised loan schedules at the Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic energy project.

Close Vote Expected On Excess Profits Tax

U. S. Raises Subsidy on War Goods

The Munitions Board announced yesterday a new policy of unlimited subsidies for businessmen producing scarce war-essential materials for the Nation's defense stockpiles.

The program, approved by President Truman, removes the former subsidy ceiling of 25 percent above world market prices.

A Munitions Board spokesman refused to reveal what materials had been or would be covered by subsidies. Presidential Assistant John R. Steelman emphasized, however, that the new policy is not to be considered "a mandate of general price increases or premiums."

Every instance of paying more than 25 percent support price "should be justified in terms of urgent national security needs," Steelman said.

He advised the Munitions Board that subsidies could be paid above the old limit only where "procurement of a material in the United States serves a public interest."

The Government also clamped a lid yesterday on Federal inventories and buying, and told nondefense departments to live off their "fat" through the Korean war emergency.

General Services Administrator Jess Larson exempted only the Defense Department from his order, but he said he'd urged Defense Secretary Louis Johnson to consider a similar move.

The order is expected to save 50 million dollars to 100 million dollars from the yearly bill for equipment and supplies going to civilian agencies.

At the same time Larson lifted a 10-day-old "freeze" order on disposal of Government surplus property, but substituted new regulations making sure no surplus is sold that is needed for national defense.

He said the inventory regulations are designed to pare down purchase of articles using critical materials. These include motor vehicles, typewriters, and filing cabinets.

He released a list of 11 critical materials—aluminum, copper, cement, lead, leather, lumber, paper, steel, wool, zinc and natural or synthetic rubber.

All civilian agency inventories must be trimmed by June 31, 1951, so they have just enough to get along with, Larson said, and they must get fullest possible use out of what they have on hand. Some of the articles will be cut to a three-month supply.

The order regulating surplus property disposal requires that the Munitions Board be given 30 days to check whether real estate is needed for defense purposes before it is sold. Other property will be screened by the Navy and GSA.

Despite a presidential demurrer, an excess profits tax rider to the "Korean war" tax bill yesterday appeared headed for an extremely close Senate vote, probably today.

Flat word that Mr. Truman doesn't want an excess profits tax "at this time" was delivered to the Capitol by "Big Four" legislative leaders.

A party poll of Senate Democrats, however, showed a substantial majority of those responding favored a profits levy now, a Senate official said.

Eight in Doubt

About eight Senate Democrats hadn't made up their minds as of last night, among them Senate Administration Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.).

What left the outcome still in doubt was a party poll of Senate Republicans, trending sharply the other way. The first 19 GOP Senators responding are said to have opposed the special levy, by a margin of about 2 to 1.

One advocate of the profits tax said he thought Democrats had the votes to approve the tax bill rider "if Senate Republicans don't kill it off."

Jointly sponsored by Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D. Wyo.) and Tom Connally (D., Tex.) the proposed rider imposes an 85 percent tax, retroactive to July 1, on "above normal" corporation profits.

Following yesterday's White House leadership conference Senator Lucas told newsmen Mr. Truman wants his five-billion-dollars emergency tax bill kept as simple as possible, and doesn't want the profits tax tied to it.

Lucas said the President doesn't think the O'Mahoney-Connally proposal "can be administered and he doesn't want to go into this tax until we know all the answers."

War Profits Stand

"But that doesn't mean the President is not very strongly for taking the profits out of war," said Lucas. "The Treasury and the Congressional tax staff will bring forth a proposal later. But he thinks it would only complicate matters at this time."

Lucas added that personally he hasn't yet made up his mind how to vote.

Senate Finance Chairman Walter F. George (D., Ga.), leading the Senate fight on the profits tax, told the Senate yesterday it would be "highly inflationary." He argued that some corporations would resort to "extravagances" to escape paying the tax, and that both prices and wages would be boosted in its wake."

O'Mahoney argued just as emphatically that the profits levy would be anti-inflationary.

"If it does nothing else, it will put an end to the upsurge in prices," O'Mahoney told newsmen.

Contending his own and Connally's proposal is "quite mild," he implied Congress may be in a mood to vote a much stiffer tax next year.

"But prices may have risen much higher, and six months' revenue would be lost," he said.

House Votes Inquiry Into VA Education

The House yesterday voted for a full investigation of the Veterans Administration educational program.

It approved a resolution by Representative Teague (D., Tex.), directing House Speaker Rayburn to name a special nine-member committee to conduct the inquiry. Teague is expected to be named chairman.

Weare New Head Of Paris Edition of Herald Tribune

New York, Aug. 28 (U.P.).—The election of Buel F. Weare as president of the European edition of the New York Herald Tribune was announced today by Mrs. Ogden Reid, president of the New York Herald Tribune.

Weare formerly was head of the Herald Tribune syndicate and news service and has been general manager of the European edition since April.

The resignation of Geoffrey Parsons, jr., as editor of the European edition was announced at the same time. Parsons, who has served the paper nearly 10 years as war correspondent, London bureau chief and editor of the European edition since December, 1944, is resigning to take a position in the United States.

J. E. M'Donald Loses Office He Held 20 Years

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 28 (AP).—John C. White of Wichita Falls, a 25-year-old red-head, is Texas' new State commissioner of agriculture.

The Texas election bureau's final count on Saturday's second Democratic primary, today gave White 11,074 votes more than J. E. McDonald, 69, who had held the office 20 years. The election bureau estimated that only 12,000 votes remained uncounted.

State Democratic leaders had tried to keep McDonald off the party primary ballot because he admits that he votes Republican when he feels like it. The last count gave White 351,149 votes to 340,075 for McDonald.

U. N. Forces Recapture Kigye, Near Pohang

peated quick trips from the strip to the front.

The Reds were reported using 40,000 troops along the jagged northern front, slipping strong patrols through the mountains to within 18 miles of Taegu.

One regiment of the South Korean Sixth Division was "forced back four miles southeast from Uihung" on the road leading to Taegu from the northeast, the Eighth Army said in its noon communique. The Sixth Division was under constant attack yesterday, the communique added.

Reinforcements for the tired United Nations forces arrived in Korea with the landing of 1500 men from two crack British regiments. These men — from the Middlesex and the Argyll and Sutherland regiments — are the first British ground force committed to Korea. They were greeted by their own commanders, who flew ahead from Hong Kong, and by United States and Korean military officials.

Field dispatches Monday midnight from the Pohang sector acknowledged that the military situation there was "confused and uncertain."

Associated Press Correspondent Tom Lambert, in a midnight dispatch from Pohang, said the South Koreans had moved toward Red-held Kigye, 10 miles northwest of Pohang. There they ran into strong enemy positions. The amount regained was not disclosed.

AP Correspondent Hal Boyle, on the same front, had reported that at dusk Monday the Reds were within two and one-half miles of Pohang and still advancing despite allied naval and artillery fire.

Lambert said the American defense command was pressing for the South Koreans to regain the 6 to 7 miles lost in the past three days, but that the confusion caused additional United States forces to be sent to the area for use if conditions worsened.

The Communists aim, he wrote, appeared to be to outflank Taegu, vital forward base 45 air miles southwest of Pohang. After dark Monday, undetermined numbers of North Korean infantry and vehicles were reported moving south about 30 miles west of Pohang.

A strong attack there, Lambert noted, could cut the Taegu-Pohang road and isolate the South Koreans and Americans to the east. That road was under sniper fire Sunday night but was reported clear again Monday.

American officers were confident the enemy would be stopped. At the same time they were admittedly unsure about the enemy's real intentions.

"Information is so skimpy we just cannot tell yet," one officer told Correspondent Boyle.

But Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, United States Eighth commander, declared in a message to the South Koreans:

"It is my belief the overextended enemy is making his last gasp. Tear him apart now so that our road to victory will be much surer and quicker."

General MacArthur's headquarters summary at 1:20 a. m. Tuesday (10:20 a. m. EST Monday), which often lags behind field dispatches, gave this picture along the whole front:

In the Pohang-Kigye sector no significant changes, but enemy pressure continuing.

In the center of the northern line the South Korean Sixth Division repulsed an enemy force of company strength and forced it to withdraw toward Sansong, 18 air miles northeast of Taegu.

Six miles north of Waegwan one of three enemy tanks was destroyed.

On the northern end of the western front, United States First Cavalry patrols stabbed across the Naktong River and killed eight of an enemy patrol. Two prisoners were taken.

Farther west of the Naktong, roads running southeast of Sonju, 18 miles west of Taegu, were jammed with pedestrian traffic and oxen trains.

Central and southwest sectors, quiet with no significant action reported.

United States pilot observers reported fighting all along the east-west northern line—about 45 air miles long. These observers said the Reds were going strong.

Assembly Votes Unified Army For Europe

Strasbourg, France, Aug. 28 (AP). The European Consultative Assembly tonight indorsed an eventual European defense authority and a unified European army as proposed by Winston Churchill.

Europe's unofficial parliament took the decision in the face of British Laborite objections by a vote of 69 to 19 with two abstentions.

Previously the assembly had turned down a proposal by former French Premier Paul Reynaud asking that a supranational authority on defense be set up immediately.

The indorsement of an eventual unified army was on the technical point of whether the special "political authorities" authorized by an assembly resolution could handle the "political aspects of defense problems."

Just before the vote, Britain's Laborite leader, Hugh Dalton, asserted he disagreed strongly with this interpretation.

The Assembly handed British Laborites another set back by deciding 93-8 to call upon assemblymen to submit resolutions passed by this body to their respective national parliaments.

Dalton objected vigorously to one clause which would bind assemblymen to support in their home parliaments the resolutions they had supported here.

The Assembly earlier unanimously adopted a declaration of Strasbourg calling for "peace without appeasement" of the Communist world.

The resolution of the European Consultative Assembly was designed by its backers as a means of countering the so-called Stockholm peace petition initiated by Communists.

The declaration was written by 26 Socialist leaders of 13 Western nations and approved by a vote of 82 to 0, with only the Belgian Socialist, Henri Rolin, abstaining. He angrily contended the declaration was "resigned to the inevitability of war" and would encourage the "automatic recognition of President Syngman Rhee's reactionary South Korea regime."

Maj. Hess, 1-Man Air Force, To Train South Korean Pilots

Masan, Korea, Aug. 28 (AP).—Maj. Dean Hess, the "one man air force" of the South Korean war, has been grounded by official order.

But only until he can take the air again leading South Korean fliers against the Reds.

"And that won't be long," the 32-year-old airman from Marietta, Ohio, said today.

So far as the infantry in concerned, Hess is probably the outstanding air hero of the war. They know him by his radio call sign—"Mackintosh One." That's a sign that an F-51 fighter with South Korean Forces marking, will flash down to tree-top level to blast enemy machineguns and troops.

Hess flew 95 missions in less than two months. Sometimes he made six sorties in a day.

Infantry units he has supported have written to his commanders, recommending him for medals ranging up to the Distinguished Service Cross.

But for Hess the greatest reward was that infantrymen down in the flea-infested fox holes thanked him time and again.

Once he saved 25 surrounded American soldiers by strafing within 50 feet of them from an altitude so low the soldiers said the Reds could have hit his plane with rocks.

Hess, a flying scholar who holds a master's degree from Ohio State University in diplomatic history, is officially head of the South Korean Air Force advisory group.

The order for him to stop flying came because higher headquarters wanted him on the ground to train 66 South Korean cadets now learning basic flying, and another group of flying Koreans who must convert from AT-6 training planes to F-51 fighters.

All Communist Ties Broken by Pressman

ly denounced communism and nazism.

After an involved, legalistic sparring bout with Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.), Pressman finally named three persons as associated with him in a in a Communist "group" here in 1934 and for about a year thereafter. Pressman then was assistant general counsel in the Agriculture Adjustment Administration.

Witt, Abt, Kramer

The three were Nathan Witt, John Abt and Charles Kramer, he said, who had been named previously by Whittaker Chambers as being members of a Communist cell here.

To that extent, Pressman bore out Chambers' charges. But Pressman insisted that Alger Hiss, who has been convicted of perjury in denying that he passed State Department documents to Chambers, was not a member of his Communist group. Nor did he know Hiss to be a Communist, he said.

A new element of mystery was publicly added to the revelations involving Chambers, however, when Pressman said that a man whom he later learned was Whittaker Chambers, came to Pressman's New York law office in 1936 with a man named "J. Eckhart."

Eckhart, said Pressman, was identified to him as a representative of the Spanish Republican government, seeking to buy arms for Spain in Mexico.

Pressman said he went to Mexico with Eckhart by plane, spent several days there, and returned without accomplishing the mission.

Representative Nixon at that point introduced into the record testimony from Chambers, taken at a hitherto secret executive session of the House committee in December, 1948.

This showed Chambers had testified that in 1937 or '38 a Dr. Philip Rosenbleitt had gone to Russia and had been instructed by Stalin to seek blueprints in the United States for automatic shell-loading mechanism for artillery.

Chambers, testimony showed, said that Rosenbleitt then came to him, seeking the "smartest Communist lawyer I know," who would also be a patent expert.

As a result, Chambers testified, he later heard that a Gerald Mark Moran, assigned by Rosenbleitt, and Pressman made air trips around the country to buy munitions.

Pressman pronounced this a "perfectly fantastic story by Mr. Chambers."

He never knew anyone by the name of Moran, Pressman declared, and "I never handled a patent case in my life."

During 1937-38, said Pressman emphatically, he had no private clients, being then completely engaged in his post as general counsel of the CIO—in which post he continued until 1948.

Ready to Tell All

Throughout four hours of testimony, Pressman insisted he had completely abandoned Communism and was ready to tell everything he knew even though he said he could not see that it would add "one iota" to the record on espionage or subversion.

At no time had he ever had the faintest association with espionage said the 44-year-old Pressman.

The hearing marked a strange departure in the committee's proceedings, for it was the first time that a major witness accused as a Communist had first refused to testify—as Pressman had refused in 1948—and then returned for a highly talkative session.

The tall, tanned Pressman appeared tense as the hearing opened, but before the hearing was many minutes old his voice and posture relaxed. Then he was the skilled attorney at ease in a courtroom, in a situation which he frequently seemed to command with the legal knowledge which even his critics concede is brilliant.

Pressman, like Alger Hiss, was graduated from Harvard University Law School, but he vehemently denied getting Hiss his first job in Washington.

When he came to Washington, Pressman said, Hiss was "already working with Jerome Frank as his assistant" in the general counsel's office of the AAA.

In 1934, when Henry A. Wallace—then head of the AAA—asked for the resignation of Frank and several of his assistants, "I was among them," said Pressman. Hiss stayed on.

Recruited by Ware

Pressman said he was recruited into the Communist Party in 1934 by Harold Ware, previously identified as a son of famed Communist "Mother Bloore."

Pressman insisted that if he were forced to name persons as Communists whose names were already known to the committee it would add nothing, and that such a practice would be more to the disadvantage of the committee in the future than to him.

At one point, the legalism reached a stage where Pressman was saying, to avoid a flat refusal to answer:

"I refuse to decline to answer your question."

"I can appreciate your individual feelings," countered Representative Nixon in answer to Pressman's protests that there was a moral issue involved, but, "There is a greater moral issue involved—the security of the country."

Besides Abt, Witt and Kramer, who were employed with Pressman in the AAA, he has no knowledge of any other Government employe who was a Communist, Pressman said.

The four men, Pressman said, met at each other's homes to discuss literature "of a Communist nature." This literature was brought by Ware, he said, or "J. Peters." Peters has been named by Chambers as the "head of the entire underground" in the United States, and reportedly has since left this country.

Ended Party Affiliation

"When I left the city of Washington (in 1935)," Pressman said, "I advised the group . . . I was disassociating myself with organized membership of the Communist Party. . ."

"Was your break in 1935 an ideological break with the party?" asked Representative Nixon.

"I would say, not completely."

Pressman never specifically stated what his relations were with Communist leaders—beyond relations involving official CIO duties.

"I met with them (Communists) and dealt with them," he said.

"At no time did I ever accept directions or instructions from these members of the Communist Party," he said. "I challenge anyone to point to any one of my actions that was contrary to established policy of the CIO."

Asked if CIO policy during his tenure ever departed from Communist policy, he noted his and the CIO's support of Lend-Lease in 1941, which the Communist opposed.

In 1940, he noted a CIO resolution condemning communism nazism and fascism, passed while he was secretary of the resolutions committee. But he later added, he personally opposed this lumping of communism with the other two ideologies.

Asked if the CIO in 1940 did not oppose any foreign entanglements, he said that was correct, then added to Representative Nixon:

"Without being in any way coy about the matter, I would like to point out that at the same time the leaders of the Republican Party were taking substantially the same policy."

This brought a guffaw from the audience which packed the hearing room in the Old House Office Building.

Another of the many touches of mirth which broke the strained atmosphere of the klieg-lighted committee room came when Pressman, asked if he could remember when J. Peters left the country, asked Representative Nixon if he could remember that himself.

Nixon paused momentarily, then said:

"Oh, I think about 1948."

"Now," said Pressman with a grin, "you see the difficulty I've been having with dates."

Pressman was repeatedly challenged by the committee to explain his refusal to "talk" in 1948, or to provide information to the FBI on his knowledge about communism. Each time he said his decision to break completely with communism had not been made.

"As of this time," he said, "there is a complete absolute, ideological break."

Despite the fact that he was associated with Witt in a law partnership after leaving the CIO in 1948, Pressman said, he has no knowledge whether Witt now is or is not a Communist. The same applies to Abt and Kramer, he said.

Pressman, in answer to a question by Representative Nixon, said he had lived in Washington at 3000 Connecticut ave. nw., "right next to the Zoo," but flatly denied he had ever been visited there by Whittaker Chambers.

"And he never saw the color of my furniture either," said Pressman, in reference to the fact that Chambers, in testifying against Alger Hiss, described Hiss's furniture in his Washington residences.

Pressman said he had "absolutely no information" about Alger Hiss's brother, Donald Hiss, who was also named by Chambers.

Pressman, asked to identify a long list of persons, said he knew some, but said he had no knowledge whatsoever as to their possible Communist affiliation.

Among those he said he knew were Victor Perlo, Nathan G. Silvermaster, George Silverman and Henry Collins.

But he said he knows Richard Branston of Washington, whom he described as "an open Communist," and knows Branston's wife. It was at the Branston home, he said, that he met Silvermaster.

Pressman also said he had been consulted by an official of the Soviet Embassy to discuss selection of attorney Abraham Pomerantz in the Valentin Gubitchev-Judith Coplon stolen documents trial in New York.

But Presshman maintained that many "completely false" rumors around Washington have linked him with people he never met. Many of these "stories," he said, are spread by an "individual around Washington who is just a drunken paranoic."

Rather than seek to dig such charges out of real or imagined past, said Pressman, it is far more important to strengthen democracy in the present. "I intend to fight strongly for democracy," he declared.

It was not announced whether Pressman may be recalled before the committee. Committee Chairman John S. Wood (D., Ga.), said the committee today will meet in closed session with former Communist Daily Worker editor Louis F. Budenz.

Malik Repays Chinese Delegate For Dinner Snub

Lake Success, Aug. 28 (AP).—Russia's Jakob A. Malik failed to invite Nationalist China's United Nations delegate, T. F. Tsiang, to a dinner he is giving at the Waldorf-Astoria Wednesday night, it was learned today.

In snubbing Tsiang, Malik is paying him back for a similar snub when Tsiang was president of the Council last January. Tsiang also held his dinner at the Waldorf.

Malik is entertaining fellow delegates to the Security Council in accordance with the practice established by previous presidents.

Court Revokes Bail of Eleven Convicted Reds

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—The United States Court of Appeals today revoked the bail of the 11 convicted Communist leaders and gave them 30 days to try to stay their jail terms.

The order was in a two-to-one decision by the three-judge court.

United States Attorney Irving H. Saypol said the ruling in effect gave the Red leaders a 30-day stay of their prison terms.

During the time, he said, the convicted men may apply to the United States Supreme Court for a further stay of sentence pending determination of their case before it.

The Court of Appeals, at the same time, denied a petition by the Red leaders for a rehearing of their appeal.

The 11 Communists were convicted last fall of conspiring to advocate violent overthrow of the U. S. Government.

All but one of the 11 have been free in bail totaling $260,000 which would be continued for 30 days under the decision.

The majority decision was signed by Judges Thomas W. Swan and Harrie B. Chase.

Eugene Dennis, general secretary of the Communist Party, already is serving a one-year jail term on a separate conviction for contempt of Congress.

Judge Learned Hand, in a dissenting opinion on the bail revocation, said:

"I regard the case as involving substantial questions and therefore entitling the defendants to remain on bail 'pending certiorari.' I would continue bail until either the petition for certiorari is denied or granted."

(Granting of such a petition would be in the hands of a United States Supreme Court justice, and would enable the defendants to remain free pending their appeal.)

Sypol said that if the United States Supreme Court denies the Communists' request to remain at liberty pending appeal, the defendants must surrender and begin their terms.

The convicted, besides Dennis, are Irving Potash, Jack Stachel, John B. Williamson, Gus Hall, Henry Winston, John Gates, Robert G. Thompson, Gilbert Green, Carl Winter and Benjamin J. Davis.

U. S. Seeks Support Of U. N. on Formosa

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Generla MacArthur's statement collided with a developing Administration effort to get United Nations support for its position toward Formosa.

The Administration wants as many other governments as possible to approve its policy of keeping the island "neutralized" during the Korean war and until after a Japanese peace settlement.

It wants such support so that if the Chinese Communists attack the island they will be flouting the authority of the U. N. as well as the power of the United States.

This was the chief unannounced reason why President Truman ordered the General to "withdraw" his statement to the Veterans of Foreign Wars. For the emphasis of the MacArthur statement was on the strategic interests of the United States alone, and took no account of the viewpoint of its U. N. partners and allies in Korea.

Fleet Patrol Not Approved

These allies have never officially approved the President's statement of June 27, ordering the Seventh Fleet to patrol Formosan waters. Some of them, notably India and the United Kingdom, dislike and fear what they regard as a virtual alliance between the Unted States and the Chiang Kai-shek regime on the island.

There were at least three incidental reasons why, in the opinion of Administration leaders, the MacArthur statement would have played havoc with American diplomacy.

The first was its implied rebuke to Prime Minister Nehru of India, and its assumption that General MacArthur knew the Oriental mind better than others. This came at a time when the Administration was making urgent efforts to get Asian troops into the U. N. forces in Korea, so as to counter the Soviet propaganda that this was a white man's war of the "colonial powers" against an Asian people.

The second incidental reason was that the Administration has been trying, through intermediaries, to put a restraining hand on the Chinese Communist leaders. One such intermediary has been R. M. Panikkar, the Indian Ambassador in Peking, who has been trying to persuade the Communists there not to attack Formosa or join in the Korean war.

No Thought of Annexing

President Truman made a more direct appeal to the Chinese Communists on July 19 when, in his message to Congress, he assured them that the United States had no thought of annexing Formosan territory. The MacArthur statement, with its emphasis on American strategic interests, could have been read as an announcement that we would keep the island for ourselves.

Finally, MacArthur sent shivers down Administration spines by his use of the word "aggressive" to describe American policy in Asia. For the word "aggressive" has two connotations. One of them means pushful, firm and determined; the other, a favorite of Soviet propaganda, means warlike and "warmongering."

How, officials here wondered, could the United States brand Soviet policy as "aggressive" and at the same time boast, in the words of its own commander, that its own policy was "aggressive" too?

For all these and other reasons, the President and his advisers decided they had to repudiate the MacArthur statement, and risk the undoubted partisan clamor that would be stirred up at home by ordering it "withdrawn."

Truman Statement Sent to U. N.

The Administration has not yet decided exactly how to associate the U. N., even partially, with the Formosan policy. It took a first tiny step in this direction by informing the U. N. promptly and publicly of the President's statement of June 27.

It took another last week when Ambassador Warren R. Austin invited the U. N. to investigate Chinese Communist and Soviet charges of American "aggression" on Formosan soil.

The next step may be determined when Secretary Acheson meets the British and French Foreign Ministers next month. The State Department announced yesterday that this meeting would take place in New York from September 12 to 14, on the eve of the United Nations General Assembly.

Formosa has been placed tentatively on the agenda. The British are especially anxious to discuss it, for they haye recognized Communist China, and would hardly regard an assault on Formosa as an act of "aggression" on the Korean model.

Certainly the aim of all three powers is not just to beat back a Communist assault on Formosa but to prevent it from starting, and to keep Communist China from pouring its masses of trained troops into the Korean war.

After the Foreign Ministers' meeting, the next step probably will be discussion of Formosa in the 59-nation Assembly. At that time the United States, or one or more of its allies, may propose stationing a U. N. commission in Formosa or possibly turning the island over to a U. N. administration pending a Japanese peace treaty.

Whatever may be decided, the Administration feels it has to do something at the Assembly to get off its present solitary and unsupported perch on Formosa, and to get into the more comfortable position of being one among many keepers of peace in Asia.

Hare Is Named Envoy To Sandi Arabia, Yemen

President Truman yesterday nominated Raymond A. Hare, a foreign service career officer from Iowa, as Ambassador to Saudi Arabia following the resignation of J. Reeves Child.

Hare will serve, as did Childs, as minister to the Kingdom of Yemen concurrently with the Saudi Arabian post.

MacArthur Gets VFW Backing

Chicago, Aug. 28 (AP).—The Veterans of Foreign Wars pledged their "complete confidence in the integrity and ability" of Gen. Douglas MacArthur today after learning that his message on Formosa had been ordered withdrawn.

The VFW's fifty-first national encampment voted unanimously to cable its confidence and support" to the General.

The convention acted after Clyde A. Levis, commander-in-chief, reported "without any comment whatsoever" that MacArthur had been directed to withdraw his message to the encampment.

The convention received Lewis' report in silence. The commander said he had cabled MacArthur that his wishes woud be respected but that because the message had been released to the press Friday, he was certain the story would be published in some places.

Lewis added in his cable that he "deeply regrets any embarrassment this may cause, but be assured the VFW is with you to a man."

The commander told the convention "It is now a closed incident on which there will be no comment."

But the White House action was expected to have repercussions on the convention floor in the form of resolutions now being worked out in committees. These are tentatively scheduled for debate Wednesday.

In a speech delivered to the afternoon session, Senator Karl E. Mundt (R., S. Dak.) told the convention the Administration should "encourage rather than censor honest reports to the people such as Gen. Douglas MacArthur has given this encampment and which so narrowly escaped being withheld from the people."

"Keep always in mind that it is not the politicians down in Washington but the people of America to whom this country belongs and by whom our Government is operated," he added.

Mundt said that Secretary of State Acheson was "tragically wrong when he reprimanded Secretary Matthews yesterday for his address in Boston."

Text of Gen. MacArthur's Statement on Formosa to VFW

Here is the text of General MacArthur's message which was originally scheduled for delivery yesterday at the Fifty-first National Encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Chicago. MacArthur asked late Sunday that the message be canceled, after being ordered to do so by President Truman, but the request came too late to catch all deadlines.

"Your inspiring message of the seventeenth has moved me deeply and I trust that you will convey to all of my comrades-in-arms of the Veterans of Foreign Wars assembled on the occasion of our Fifty-first annual national encampment my assurance that their confidence and support will give this command much added strength to meet the tests of battle which lie immediately ahead. Tell them that I am happy to report that their successors in arms now engaging the enemy along our battle lines in South Korea are exemplifying that same high standard of devotion, fortitude and valor which characterized their own march to victory when they themselves engaged in combat in the field. From senior commanders down through all ranks, their tactical skill, their invincible determination, and their fighting qualities against a fanactical foe, well trained, expertly directed and heavily armed, have upheld our country's finest traditions. Toward victory, however, difficult the road, they are giving an account of themselves which should make every American heart beat with pride and infinite satisfaction.

"In view of misconceptions currently being voiced concerning the relationship of Formosa to our strategic potential in the Pacific, I believe it in the public interest to avail myself of this opportunity to state my views thereon to you, all of whom having fought overseas understand broad strategic concepts. To begin with, any appraisal of that strategic potential requires an appreciation of the changes wrought in the course of the past war. Prior thereto the western strategic frontier of the United States lay on the littoral line of the Americas with an exposed island salient extending out through Hawaii, Midway and Guam to the Philippines. That salient was not an outpost of strength but an avenue of weakness along which the enemy could and did attack us. The Pacific was a potential area of advancement for any predatory force intent upon striking at the bordering land areas.

"All of this was changed by our Pacific victory. Our strategic frontier then shifted to embrace the entire Pacific Ocean which has become a vast moat to protect us as long as we hold it. Indeed, it acts as a protective shield to all of the Americas and all free lands of the Pacific Ocean area we control to the shores of Asia by a chain of islands extending in an arc from the Aleutians to the Marianas held by us and our free allies. From this island chain we can dominate with air power every Asiatic port from Vladivostock to Singapore and prevent any hostile movement into the Pacific. Any predatory attack from Asia must be an amphibious effort. No amphibious force can be successful with our control of the sea lanes and the air over these lanes in its avenue of advance. With naval and air supremacy and modern ground elements to defend bases, any major attack from continental Asia toward us or our friends of the Pacific would come to failure. Under such conditions the Pacific no longer represents menacing avenues of approach for a prospective invader—it assumes instead the friendly aspect of a peaceful lake. Our line of defense is a natural one and can be maintained with a minimum of militry effort and expense. It invisions no attack against anyone nor does it provided the bastions essential for offensive operations, but properly maintained would be an invincible defense against aggression. If we hold this line we may have peace—lose it and war is inevitable.

"The geographic location of Formosa is such that in the hand of a power unfriendly to the United States it constitutes an enemy salient in the very center of this defensive perimeter, 100 to 150 miles closer to the adjacent friendly segments—Okinawa and the Philippines—than any point in continental Asia. At the present time there is on Formosa a concentration of operational air and naval bases which is potentially greater than any similar concentration of the Asiatic mainland between the Yellow Sea and the Strait of Malacca. Additional bases can be developed in a relatvely short time by an aggressixe exploitation of all World War II Japanese facilities. An enemy force utilizing those installatons currently available could increase by 100 percent the air effort which could be directed against Okinawa as compared to operations based on the mainland and at the same time could direct damaging air attaacks with fighter type aircraft against friendly installations in the Philippines which are currently beyond the range of fighters based on the mainland. Our air supremacy at once would become doubtful.

"As a result of its geographic location and base potential, utilization of Formosa by a military power hostile to the United States may either counter-balance or overshadow the strategic importance of the central and southern flank of the United States front line position. Formosa in the hands of such an hostile power could be compared to an unsinkable aircraft carrier and submarine tender ideally located to accomplish offensive strategy and at the same time checkmate defensive or counter-offensive operations by friendly forces based on Okinawa and the Philippines. This unsinkable carrier-tender has the capacity to operate from 10 to 20 air groups of types ranging from jet fighters to B-29 type bombers as well as to provide forward operating facilities for short-range coastal submarines. In acquiring this forward submarine base, the efficacy of the short range submarine would be so enormously increased by the additional radius of activity as to threaten completely sea traffic from the south and interdict all sea lanes in the western Pacific. Submarine blockade by the enemy with all its destructive ramifications would thereby become a virtual certainty.

"Should Formosa fall and bases thereafter come into the hands of a potential enemy of the United States, the yatter will have acquired an additional "fleet" which will have been obtained and can be maintained at an incomparably lower cost than could its equivalent in aircraft carriers and submarine tenders. Current estimates of air and submarine resources in the Far East indicate the capability of such a potential enemy to extend his forces southward and still maintain an imposing degree of military strength for employment elsewhere in the Pacific area.

"Historically, Formosa has been used as a springboard for just such military agression directed against areas to the south. The most notable and recent example was the utilization of it by the Japanese in World War II. At the outbreak of the Pacific war in 1941, it played an important part as a staging area and supporting base for the various Japanese invasion convoys. The supporting air forces of Japan's army and navy were based on fields situated along Southern Formosa. From 1942 through 1944 Formosa was a vital link in the transportation and communication chain which stretched from Japan through Okinawa and the Philippines to southeast Asia. As the United States carrier forces advanced into the western Pacific, the bases on Formosa assumed an increasingly greater role in the Japanese defense scheme. Should Formosa fall into the hands of an hostile power, history would repeat itself. Its military potential would again be fully exploited as the means to breach and neutralize our western Pacific defense system and mount a war of conquest against the free nations of the Pacific basin.

"Nothing could be more fallacious than the threadbare argument by those who advocate appeasement and defeatism in the Pacific that if we defend Formosa we alienate continental Asia. Those who speak thus do not understand the Orient. They do not grant that it is in the pattern of the Oriental psychology to respect and follow agressive, resolute and dynamic leadership—to quickly turn on a leadership characterized by timidity or vacillation—and they underestimate the Oriental mentality. Nothing in the last five years has so inspired the Far East as the American determination to preserve the bulwarks of our Pacific ocean strategic position from future encroachment, for few of its peoples fail accurately to appraise the safeguard such determination brings to their free institutions. To pursue any other course would be to turn over the fruits of our Pacific victory to a potential enemy. It would shift any future battle area five thousand miles eastward to the coasts of the American continents, our own home coast; it would completely expose our frends in the Philippines, our friends in Australia and New Zealand, our friends in Indonesia, our friends in Japan, and other areas, to the lustful thrusts of those who stand for slavery as against liberty, for atheism as against God.

"The decision of President Truman on June 27 lighted into flame a lamp of hope throughout Asia that was burning dimly toward extinction. It marked for the Far East the focal and turning point in this area's struggle for freedom. It swept aside in one great monumental stroke all if the hypocrisy and the sophistry which has confused and deluded so many people distant from the actual scene.

Letter by President Restating U. S. Policy

Following is the text of a letter sent by President Truman Sunday to Ambassador Warren Austin outlining the United States position on Formosa:

Dear Warren:

As I told you on the telephone this morning, I want to congratulate you on your able presentation of the views of the United States Government in the Security Council of the United Nations from the first onset of the aggression against the republic of Korea. Throughout the entire course of the proceedings you have represented this Government with great effectiveness and in full accordance with my directions.

The letter which you addressed to the secretary general of the United Nations on August 25 on the subject of Formosa admirably sums up the fundamental position of this Government as it had been stated by me on June 27 and in my message to the Congress on July 19. You have clearly set forth in that letter the heart and essence of the problem. You have faithfully set down my views as they were then and as they are now.

Austin Letter Is Quoted

To the end that there be no misunderstanding concerning the position of the Government of the United States with respect to Formosa, it may be useful to repeat here the seven fundamental points which you so clearly stated in your letter to Mr. Lie.

"(1) The United States has not encroached on the territory of China, nor has the United States taken aggressive action against China.

"(2) The action of the United States in regard to Formosa was taken at a time when that island was the scene of conflict with the mainland. More serious conflict was threatened by the public declaration of the Chinese Communist authorities. Such conflict would have threatened the security of the United Nations Forces operating in Korea under the mandate of the Security Council to repel the aggression of the republic of Korea. They threatened to extend the conflict through the Pacific area.

"(3) The action of the United States was an impartial neutralizing action addressed both to the forces on Formosa and to those on the mainland. It was an action designed to keep the peace and was, therefore, in full accord with the spirit of the Charter of the United Nations. As President Truman has solemnly declared, we have no designs on Formosa, and our action was not inspired by any desire to acquire a special position for the United States.

"(4) The action of the United States was expressly stated to be without prejudice to the future political settlement of the status of the island. The actual status of the island is that it is territory taken from Japan by the victory of the Allied Forces in the Pacific. Like other such territories, its legal status cannot be fixed until there is international action to determine its future. The Chinese government was asked by the Allies to take the surrender of the Japanese forces on the island. That is the reason the Chinese are there now.

"(5) The United States has a record through history of friendship for the Chinese people. We still feel the friendship and know that millions of Chinese reciprocate it. We took the lead with others in the last United Nations General Assembly to secure approval of a resolution on the integrity of China. Only the Union of the Soviet Socialist Republics and its satellites did not approve that resolution.

U. N. Study Would Be Welcome

"(6) The United States would welcome United Nations consideration of the case of Formosa. We would approve full United Nations investigation here, or on the spot. We believe that United Nations consideration would contribute to a peaceful, rather than a forceable solution of that problem.

"(7) We do not believe that the Security Council need be, or will be, diverted from its consideration of the aggression against the republic of Korea. There was a breach of the peace in Korea. The aggressor attacked, has been condemned, and the combined forces of the United Nations are now in battle to repel the aggression.

"Formosa is now at peace and will remain so unless someone resorts to force.

"If the Security Council wishes to study the question of Formosa we shall support the assist that study. Meanwhile, the president of the Security Council should discharge the duties of his office and get on with the item on the agenda, which is the complaint of aggression against the republic of Korea, and, specifically, the recognition of the right of the Korean Ambassador to take his seat and the vote on the United States resolution for the localization of the Korean conflict."

These seven points accurately record the position of the United States.

In the forthcoming discussion of the problem in the Security Council you will continue to have my complete support.

Sincerely yours,
HARRY S. TRUMAN.

British Rearming Effort Seen Held Up by Soviet Tool Orders

London, Aug. 28 (AP).—British firms asking for machine tools needed for defense production are being told they will be served after Russian orders are filled, a tool manufacturer charged today.

Joseph Greenwood, chairman and managing director of Craven Brothers, Britain's second largest engineering firm, said his company will be tied up for many months fulfilling a one-million-pound ($2,800,000) order for Soviet Russia.

For British firms, he said, "we cannot contribute so much as a split-pin for three years."

Greenwood made public a letter which he said he had sent to the Labor government today and which said in part:

"It is a horrible thought that a firm with the specialized production of Craven Brothers is so tied up when they wish to help the rearmament drive of the country."

Winston Churchill, wartime Prime Minister and leader of the Conservatve opposition, brought the subject into the open in a radio speech Saturday night.

Churchill questioned whether British firms should be making tools for Moscow.

The Board of Trade confirmed that Russia is getting the tools—£471,337 ($1,319,743) worth in the first seven months of this year.

The Ministry of Supply also conceded another Churchill statement—that Russian inspectors are permitted to go into British factories to inspect the work on the Russian orders.

A Ministry of Supply spokesman said Saturday "it is a responsibility of the firm, of course, to insure that the (Russian) inspectos do not see things which should not be seen."

Greenwood said the first shipment of tools in the big Russian order will be started on the way toward the Soviet Union on Saturday. It is packed and ready to be loaded aboard ships.

M'Arthur Is Rebuked by Truman

Republican admirers of the General might not be willing to let it drop.

Senator Knowland (R., Cal.), accused the Administration of "gagging" General MacArthur, and Representative Martin (R., Mass.), said it was another example of Administration "bungling."

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican floor leader, demanded that MacArthur make a radio report to the American people "to clarify the present muddled situation."

Cox Bans General's Statement

At Dayton, Ohio, James M. Cox, publisher, former governor of Ohio, and Democratic presidential nominee in 1920, instructed his newspapers in Dayton, Atlanta, Ga., Miami, Fla., and Springfield, Ohio, not to use the MacArthur statement on Formosa. He said:

"The Constitution of the United States definitely places control of the military under civil authority. Generals are not supposed to play the part of statesmen. This is not Rome, nor the days of Caesar."

The question of whether to publish the MacArthur statement, in view of the fact that it had been "withdrawn," was a knotty one for newspaper editors—at least for a while. MacArthur had sent copies of the text to newspapers and wire services under a covering letter dated Aug. 21. He asked that the statement not be released until presented to the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Chicago, or without the specific permission of Commander Clyde Lewis of the VFW.

David Lawrence's magazine, U. S. News and World Report, got permission from the VFM public relations director to insert the text in its September 1 issue. This went into the mails Saturday, and it was thus too late to kill it.

Yesterday two foes of the Truman Administration—Senator Donnell (R., Mo.), and Representative Martin (R., Mass.), placed the MacArthur statement in the Congressional Record using the U. S. News and World Report text for the purpose.

The White House made no effort to list the points of difference between Mr. Truman's policy on Formosa and General MacArthur's statement to the VFW, leaving that for the newsmen to do themselves.

They were reminded, however, that General MacArthur not only was our Far East Commander but was Commander in Chief of the United Nations Forces in Korea.

The White House further pointed out that the question of Korea has now been brought before the Security Council of the United Nations, and that members of the United Nation have different points of view regarding Formosa.

This suggested that General MacArthur ran afoul of President Truman when he completely overlooked what the Administration is trying to do in the U. N.

MacArthur put all emphasis on the strategic aspect of Formosa, on its essential importance to American security. Mr. Truman doubtless feels just as strongly as MacArthur about the necessity of keeping Formosa out of enemy hands, otherwise he would not have ordered the Seventh Fleet to defend it. But he also wants U. N. support for the American position, and he also wants to keep Formosa "neutralized" until the Korean war is over and a peace treaty with Japan is signed.

The story of what happened on Saturday at the White House in connection with the MacArthur statement was outlined to reporters as follows:

Mr. Truman came into possession of a copy of MacArthur's VFW statement early Saturday morning. At 10 a. m. he had a meeting in his office which was attended by Secretary of State Acheson, Secretary of Defense Johnson, W. Averell Harriman, Gen. Omar Bradley, Gen. J. Lawton Collins, and Admiral Forrest P. Sherman. This meeting had nothing to do with the MacArthur statement, the Cabinet officers and White House staff members having gathered for a briefing on the military situation in Korea.

After the briefing was concluded, however, the President brought up the matter of the MacArthur statement. He ended the discussion by telling Defense Secretary Johnson to send a message to General MacArthur and direct him to withdraw his statement to the VFW.

MacArthur Complied

MacArthur did as he was told, notifying the VFW in Chicago that he had been "directed" to withdraw his statement.

Senator Knowland (R., Calif.), was the first to strike at Mr. Truman's action, saying that the directive to MacArthur "strongly indicates that Secretary of State Acheeson and Trgve Lie, Secretary General of the United Nations, are now preparing for another Munich with the Republic of China and the Island of Formosa as the pawns."

Knowland added:

"Our moral leadership was undermined by the secret deals of Yalta regarding which neither the Congress of the United States nor the American people had information until years later . . .

"For the past several years our responsible military men have been required by the Administration to support budget requests before the Congress which their professional training warned them were not adequate to the safety of this Nation. The pushing around we have taken in Korea is one of the results of this 'gag' policy.

"Now once again the Administration is 'gagging' a patriotic soldier who sees the danger facing our Nation in the Far East and wants to warn our people before it is too late.

"It now appears that the only way in which the truth will be known is for the American people to elect a Congress that will make some real investigations without fear or favor and will be prepared to recommend impeachment proceedings where the facts justify."

Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican leader, denounced the President's action as "outrageous." He added:

"General MacArthur knows more about what needs to be done in the Far East to correct the mistakes of Secretary of State Acheson than anyone in the Truman Administration.

"The American people have complete confidence in General MacArthur's judgement. Let's hear from General MacArthur and woe to him who dares say he shall not speak."

A Democrat, Senator McCarran of Nevada, joined in the Republican outcry, saying that MacArthur's views should be made known to every American.

"There is a man," said McCarran, "who is on the ground and knows what he is talking about. He has the confidence of the American people."

The last time that Mr. Truman had to crack down on a subordinate because of foreign policy was in 1946 when he fired Henry Wallace from his Cabinet. Wallace had made a be-nice-to-Russia speech in New York which seriously embarrassed the then Secretary of State, James F. Byrnes, who was in Paris at the time.

In announcing Wallace's forced resignation, Mr. Truman said on September 20, 1946:

"No member of the executive branch of the Government will make any public statement as to foreign policy which is in conflict with our established foreign policy. Any public statement on foreign policy shall be cleared with the Department of State. In case of disagreement, the matter will be referred to me."

The White House said yesterday that this directive still is in force, and that Mr. Truman reminded his Cabinet of that fact at a recent meeting.

New Shocks Felt

Mountain Chains Wiped Out by Quake

Calcutta, India, Aug. 28 (AP).—Six abrupt shocks jolted the towering Himalaya mountains again yesterday in Assam and Tibet where, geologists said today, the face of the world has been changed.

Yesterday's shocks were the most severe since the earthquake of August 15, which was one of the worst in modern history. Assam, on the Indian frontier, and forbidden Tibet have been rocked almost daily for 13 days.

Authorities said the final death toll probably will total several thousands in the disaster that raised and lowered the levels of rivers and apparently has touched off volcanic eruptions.

Authorities said the quake may have stirred volcanos extinct for thousands of years.

A fiery, scarlet glow painted the night skies above the Mishmi hills where the quake has thrown millions of tons of water from the Tsangpo River off course and into a channel it followed thousands of years ago.

The glow was believed to come from a volcano that has polluted Rivers in the area and turned them a sulfurish green since the quake of August 15.

Thousands of uprooted trees, torn from thick forests by floods unleashed by the quake choked streams all through the area, refugees reported.

Pilots flying the wartime "hump" route over the Himalayas said they believed entire chains of razor-peaked mountains apparently have disappeared in the region known as the "roof of the world."

They said the air above the area is churned in twisting "air quakes" so violent that flying is dangerous now above the Ledo Road, built by American GIs under Gen. Joseph Stilwell during the war.

Experts here said a final death estimate will be difficult because entire villages in the Himalayas and remote Tibet could have been swallowed and the world might never know.

Luckenbach Line Sued by U. S. for 14 Millions

San Francisco, Aug. 28 (AP).—The United States today filed a maritime libel action asking 14 million-dollar damages from the Luckenbach Line as a result of the sinking of the hospital ship Benevolence Friday night.

The suit, filed in Federal District Court, also asked the seizure of the freighter, Mary Luckenbach, which collided with the Benevolence in a dense fog off San Francisco's Golden Gate.

Eighteen persons are known to have died as result of the crash. Thirteen others are unaccounted for pending a final check, and 492 persons were rescued. The Benevolence sank in 75 feet of water.

The Government's libel action listed eight counts of alleged negligence on the part of the freighter's officers in charge.

Allies Decree Final Breakup of I. G. Farben Empire

Bonn, Germany, Aug. 28 (AP).—The British, French and United States high commissioners for Germany published today a new law designed to bring about the final breakup of the Octopus-like I. G. Farben chemical empire, once the biggest industrial cartel in the world.

The law provides that the remaining domestic assets of Farben be disposed among German companies so that competition will be promoted in the chemical and related industries. Farben had been able to stifle competition.

The 169 plants still under western allied jurisdiction in Germany and Berlin will be sold to independent German companies still to be formed or to existing Farben subsidiaries, but the merger of any of the new companies is prohibited by the law unless approved by the Allied Commission. All persons convicted of war crimes or of having participated in pushing Nazi war aims are barred from any new companies.

The action parallels the decentralization of Germany's steel and coal combines, ordered about two years ago.

The breakup of Farben has been in the books for five years, since the end of the war, when Russia had been joined with the western powers in confiscating the trust's assets under the four-power allied control council. When the council broke up, the western powers proceeded on a three-power basis. The Russians, meanwhile, seized for reparations 45 plants in their occupation zone, or handed the plants to the East German Communist government for socialization.

Md. Youth Wounded on Korea Front

A Landover Hills Md., youth was wounded at the Korean war front on his nineteenth birthday—August 6—his mother learned yesterday.

Pfc. Mayhew

Pfc. Charles Walter, in a letter from a Pacific area hospital, told his mother, Mrs. Stanley A. Walter of 4114 71st ave., Landover Hills, that he entered combat July 26.

Charles' 15-year-old sister, Mary Christine, is alleged to have been kidnapped. She has been missing since Sunday night.

Walter, a member of the Twenty-fourth Infantry Division, volunteered for Korean duty late last June when he was stationed at Fort Lewis, Washington, his mother said. He enlisted in June 1949. He attended La Plata, Md., High School and later worked as a bricklayer for an uncle in Silver Spring. He has three brothers.

A second District area soldier, Pfc. Amos W. Mayhew, son of Amos Mayhew, sr., of 766 11th st., se, was listed as injured in Casualty List 78 released by the Defense Department yesterday.

Nineteen-year-old Mayhew, according to his father, was injured with 17 other men when a truck, returning them from the front for a rest period, pitched over a 150-foot embankment. He had been in combat about six weeks, with the First Cavalry Division, his father said.

Young Mayhew, who has served in the Army nearly two years, attended Takoma and Coolidge High Schools. He has four brothers and one sister. Hic father works in the mail room of the Washington Times Herald and his uncle, Emory, is employed in the pressroom of The Washington Post.

Yesterday reports bring up the District area total of casualties in the Korean war to 4 killed, 12 missing in action and 23 wounded in action.

Two Virginians Listed On New Casualty Roll

The Department of Defense on casualty list No. 78, released today, announced the following Virginia casualties in the Korean area:

Wounded (Army): Pvt. James M. Fleming, son of George Robert Fleming, Route1, Charlottesville.

Injured (Army): Pvt. James E. Eubank, son of Mrs. Blanche F. Eubank, 1006 Sophia st., Fredericksburg.

Takoma Park Rezoning Bid Turned Down

The Mayor and City Council of Takoma Park, Md., opposed an application last night by Stewart Bainum for rezoning property at Garland and Carroll aves. from residential A to C for the erection of apartments.

Basis for their action was that such rezoning would be spot reclassification. The application had been overwhelmingly opposed by area property owners. The action followed pleas from 24 property owners, all members of the Sligo Park Terrace Citizens Association, whose President T. F. Hicks said the proposal would cheapen neighborhood values and constitute a traffic hazard.

Three contracts amounting to $3507 for floor, electrical and heating renovation of the fire department's gymnasium were awarded by council.

The body alos adopted a resolution welcoming the Montgomery County Junior College, which is to be conducted at the former Bliss Electrical School buildings on Takoma ave. It offered the faculty and students all possible assitance and cooperation within the city's province.

New traffic regulations were adopted in ordinances covering one-way traffic north on Jackson ave. from Ethan Allan ave. to Boyd ave. on Sunday from 7:30 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., and one-way traffic east on Kentland ave. from New Hampshire to Hopewell on Sundays from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. to aid churchgoers.

Fined After Collision

Edward Buchanan, 20, of 907 Half st. sw., was fined $150 yesterday in Municipal Court after he was convicted of driving without a license and of two counts of leaving after colliding.

Police said that on Sunday Buchan crashed a dump truck into two parked cars and then abandoned it in southwest Washington.

The Marine Corps spread out the enlistment welcome mat yesterday to married men between the ages of 17 and 28.

Until now would-be Leathernecks with wife or other dependents were barred from active duty in the Marine Corps Reserve.

The call for recruits, married or single, is for active duty for an indefinite period, Staff Sergt. Nick Gledich of the local Marine recruiting office said.

The Leathernecks are the first of the military services to invite married men into uniform.

Meanwhile, one Washington area National Guard unit left yesterday for Federal service and another departs today.

From the District, the 715th Transportation Truck Co. set out by motor convoy for Fort Eustis, Virginia. The second Washington unit to be activated, it is commanded by Capt. Milton V. Seraile of 1100 21st st. ne.

Today Alexandria's Battery B of the 710th Anti-Aircraft Artillery Battalion will entrain for Camp Stewart, Georgia, where it will undergo further training. The battery was activated August 14.

D. C. GI Found Excitement In Korea—Until He Was Hit

Two and one half years ago, Franklyn B. Jackson, jr., joined the Army to seek adventure.

Yesterday, the 21-year-old District private first class said he had found more than enough in Korea in one month to last him a lifetime. He was talking from a hospital bed at Walter Reed.

Jackson, son of Franklyn B. Jackson, a Naval Air Station employe of 1857 California st. nw., was wounded near Masan on August 6, one month from the day he landed in the country.

A member of the headquarters detachment of the 159th Field Artillery of the Twenty-fifth Division, Jackson volunteered to drive troops to the front that day.

That night he awoke at the bottom of a 500-foot ravine with a paralyzed back and a broken left leg.

"I was driving a two-and-one-half ton truck within mortar range of the front lines," he said, "when the road gave way under us. It was sabotaged.

"I started to jump out, but remembered the 15 men in the back, and tried to stop the truck from turning over. I couldn't. It went over six times and hit a tree where I fell out. The truck rolled to the bottom of the ravine. One man was killed, and a lot hurt.

"I dragged a few out, and started stumbling back up the hill, sort of dazed. About half-way up a mortar shell hit to my front, then to the right of me. I knew the next one would be mine—and it was.

"Next thing I knew it was the next day. The medics were trying to bring me around. I was hit in the back and in the head."

The six-foot-two, 185-pound soldier was removed to Japan, and flown into Walter Reed on August 26.

He attended Dunbar High School for two and one-half years, and picked up enough correspondence school credits in the Army to take him through two years of college.

Jackson intends to study architectural engineering under the GI bill when he is released.

"I've had enough adventure," he said.

More Blood Sought for Korea

Six area Red Cross chapters and the organization's bloodmobile have been asked to increase their monthly quota of 6000 pints of blood by 25 percent.

Gen. George C. Marshall, president of the American National Red Cross, announced yesterday that the Armed Forces have requested the Red Cross to step up collections of whole blood for combat units in Korea.

The General's announcement said this will necessitate each collection center to increase its regular quota by 1500 pints.

Fresh whole blood will be collected throughout the United States and shipped to the Far East from a designated point on the Pacific Coast, the announcement said.

Chapters in Prince Georges, Montgomery, Arlington and Fairfax Counties; Alexandria and boodmobile visits to nearby areas will be affected by the request, local officials said.

YOU'LL find the answer written in the delivered price tags of this bold and strapping beauty pictured here.

It's a Buick ROADMASTER—and you have only to put yourself behind the wheel to see that it is truly fine by any yardstick.

But it leaves the factory carrying the lowest price per pound of any car in the fine-car field.

That means that the money that goes into its building goes for things that really count—

For a big, husky Fireball straight-eight engine of 152 hp and all the brilliance of performance the highways can handle—

For room that measures up with the biggest, and for comfort contrived of deep soft seats and abundant space for taking it easy—

For a ride that's literally "out of this world," soft and easy as only all-coil springing can make it, yet firm and steady always, thanks to torque-tube drive—

For handling that is feather-light, for the complete smoothness of Dynaflow Drive as standard equipment, for a whole host of fine-car touches such as rich upholstery materials, flexible-spoke steering wheel, non-glare rear-view mirror, even automatic windshield washers, all included in the price.

Yes, the big question ROADMASTER answers is not how much a really fine car costs, but how little you need to pay to get all that a fine car can give.

Drop in any time on your Buick dealer for a trial ride in a ROADMASTER—and the surprisingly happy news on its delivered prices.

Capital Transit Hikes 4 Officials' Salaries salary increases granted to utility executives, but such information is put on file annually with the Commission here, a spokesman said yesterday. Latest available data is for March, 1949.

Transit Asks Information

Yesterday, Capital Transit asked the PUC to force PEPCO to furnish information it had requested in its effforts to probe why PEPCO wants a substantial rate hike in charges for electricity the traction firm uses.

The Transit company, in hearings last week, threatened to fight to the last ditch to prevent the rate increases, charging that Pepco's request, if granted by the PUC, would force it to seek another fare increase.

In a note to the PUC yesterday, Transit attorneys said that in conferences between the two utilties, Pepco has "refused to furnish or make available" analytical sources used as the basis for one exhibit, as well as the first operating budget estimate for 1949.

Transit company attorney F. G. Awalt complained the exhibit "has no meaning without knowledge of the authors of the specific responses used in compiling it."

James F. Reilly, Pepco attorney, said that Pepco has not refused to furnish any information in support of the exhibts now before the commission. He said that he thought for other information, such as the 1949 budget estimate, the commission should give its views on whether it should go in the hearing record.

The hearing on Pepco's request will resume on September 25.

Firms File Reports

Yesterday, both utility companies made reports to PUC on their July operations.

Capital Transit Co. reported net income of $34,849 for July, as compared with a deficit of $15,095 for July of last year.

The new report includes a half month's operation under the higher fares authorized for July 16. Capital Transit reported net earnings of $205,234 for the first seven months of this year, a 59.1 percent decrease from the net last year of $502,260 for the same period.

Despite this slump however, the Transit board last Friday declared a quarterly dividend, doubling the previous rate and forming the largest single disbursement in the company's 17-year history.

The dividend, company officials stated, was based on "improvement in July and August earnings because of higher fares. Transit directors are reported as confident that net earnings for the rest of 1950 will warrant a $1 a share dividend for the last two quarters.

Capital Transit's directorate has been reorganized in the past 10 months since a group of Floridians headed by Wolfson purchased stock control. Of the 15 board members appearing in the 1949 list, only four now remain. Two most recent resignations were of Robert V. Fleming and Alfred G. Neale.

The transit report filed with PUC yesterday showed a 10.6 percent drop in the number of revenue passengers over the seven months of this year, to 163,645,965, and a 6.1 percent drop or $1,018,616 in operating revenues. The operating revenues were reported for the seven months as $15,602,720.

Pepco reported its net income for July was $425,439, representing a five-percent increase or $21,953, over similar income for July, 1949.

The company earned $2,710,064 during the first seven months of the year, about $119,000 less than the same period of 1949. Operating revenues increased $21,799,705 over the period, while operating costs went up $17,624,184. Total operating income went up more than eight percent, to $4,175,521.

Senate Sends Airport Bill To President

The Senate yesterday sent to President Truman the bill to authorize a new 14 million dollar civil airport for metropolitan Washington.

The measure, passed last week by the House after earlier Senate approval, had been sent back to the Senate because of minor amendments. They were accepted without argument.

President Truman already has asked Congress to vote $2,150,000 for site planning and purchase of the land necessary for the huge field—about 2500 acres.

The location of the field may be near Annandale, in Fairfax County, Va., within easy access to Washington via the Shirley Highway. The choice of a site, by terms of the bill, is up to the Secretary of Commerce who is expected to delegate the authority to the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

Four sites, including Annandale, are now being considered but none will be definitely selected until a detailed survey has been made, according to D. W. Rentzel, head of CAA. That, in turn, awaits the appropriaton asked for by the President. Mr. Truman is expected to sign the authorization bill in a few days.

It is expected it would take about 90 days to select the site, about three years more to have the field in partial operation and an additional year for final completion. The big field is designed as an auxiliary to Natonal Airport.

One amendment to the bill in the House, which was accepted by the Senate, requires the CAA to consult with the county authorities before selecting a site.

Twelve New Cases of Polio Reported in District Area

Twelve new cases of polio were reported in Greater Washington yesterday.

One of them was 35-year-old David Macdonald, attorney to the Montgomery County Council.

Macdonald, who lives at 1807 August dr., Silver Spring, returned from vacation August 21 and had only worked a half-day when he complained of pains and stiffness in his back. He called his wife at noon and left for home immediately.

Unable to find an available hospital bed, Macdonald has been under treatment at home. His illness is not of the bulbar type, and is not believed to be serious.

Montgomery County also had another polio case reported yesterday, bringing the county's total to 31 for the year. The other case was that of a six-year-old boy, admitted to Children's Hospital August 22. He lives in the 8900 block of 2d ave., Silver Spring.

In Greater Washington, the 12 new cases reported yesterday brought the toll thus far this year to 204.

In Washington, where 6 new cases were reported, the total stands at 92, compared with 41 cases for this time last year.

The new cases are a 15-year-old girl from the 3300 block of Ross pl. nw., and a 6-month-old boy from the 400 block of Neal pl, nw., both in Children's Hospital; a 24-year-old woman from the 4500 block of Lily Ponds pl. ne., a 21-year-old woman from the 1700 block of Varnum st. nw., an 11-year-old boy from the 200 block of Hawaii ave. nw., and a 16-year-old girl from the 500 block of I st. nw., all at Gallinger Hospital.

Prince Georges County reported 3 new cases, bringing its total to 36. They are a 28-year-old man from the 5300 block of Hamilton st., Rogers Heights, hospitalized at Gallinger; a 29-year-old woman from the 4000 block of 36th st.,

Conferees Accept House Roads Figures

A Senate-House committee yesterday agreed on a $1,188,000,000 compromise Federal highway aid bill.

The money would be authorized for appropriation during the years ending June 30, 1952, and June 30, 1953.

The House originally passed a $1,293,000,000 bill. The Senate cut the figure to $1,138,000,000.

Representative Dondero (R., Mich.) told reporters the conferees had accepted the House figures of 450 million dollars for primary roads; 300 million dollars for secondary roads; and 250 million dollars for urban roads.

Civil Service Ranks Opened

the number of persons who are made eligible for status under the order. Some estimate the number will be as large as 50,000; others predict it won't top 20,000. Those who hold to the smaller figure point out that many thousands who are technically eligible have already passed competitive tests and they will be certified for permanent jobs in the normal course of events under the Government's expansion program.

Veterans Benefit

In any event the largest bloc of employes who will benefit under the order are veterans, as they have preference during lay-offs that have taken place in many agencies.

Civil Service officials explained that they recommended the order to the President because most of the people involved hold special jobs of one kind or another and that it would be uneconomical and expensive to hold Nation-wide exams to fill them on a competitive basis.

A secondary consideration is the fact that the commission desires to stabilize Federal personnel, and to keep as many experienced employes as possible on the job at this time when tens of thousands of additional people are being hired by the defense agencies.

The order doesn't benefit those persons who were laid off recently through no fault of their own and who had more than two years of service.

Incidentally, it wont's be necessary for many of the employes covered to take and pass noncompetitive exams. Those persons who have already taken and passed competitive tests for the jobs they hold will be exempt from the exam provision.

Smith Confirmed As CIA Director; Not Sure He'll Stay

By the United Press

The Senate yesterday confirmed Lieut. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith as director of the Central Intelligence Agency although he refused to commit himself permanently to the job.

Some senators have complained, particularly since the surprise Communist attack on South Korea that the agency is hampered by the fact that its directorship has changed too often.

Smith succeeds Rear Admiral Roscoe H. Hillenkoetter who, since the Korean invasion, has returned to active sea duty with the Navy.

The vote on Smith's confirmation was put off from Friday until yesterday at the request of Senator Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Ia.), who wanted to know whether the Army officer would make the job a "career."

Senator Wayne Morse (R., Ore.), said Smith told him he could not commit himself permanently and that he was being considered for the presidency of a university.

Morse told the Senate, however, that Smith believed the CIA directorship was a "great opportunity to do great public service" and he thought the general's answer was "satisfactory."

Probing GI Schools

House Majority Leader McCormack has suggested that this newspaper apologize to Speaker Rayburn for implying that he was delaying action on the Teague resolution to investigate abuses in veterans' education and training. The proof of the pudding is in the eating. Whether or not there was any deliberate delay, and some congressional sources felt that there was, there is none now, for the bill authorizing the investigation was passed by the House yesterday. Accordingly, we congratulate Speaker Rayburn, Mr. McCormack and everyone else who had a hand in bringing approval of what should be a nonpartisan inquiry to get the facts.

Shadowland

The difficulty of determining the precise point at which a Communist becomes a former Communist was illustrated by Mr. Lee Pressman's testimony yesterday before the House Committee on Un-American Activities. The transition in his case was by no means an abrupt one; indeed, it extended, apparently, over a period of about 15 years. About 1934, Mr. Pressman told the committee, he joined a Communist group or cell consisting of himself and three other employes of the Department of Agriculture. In the latter part of 1935, he left the Government service to reenter private law practice in New York and "discontinued any further participation in the group." This ended, as he put it, his organizational contact with the Communist Party.

But Mr. Pressman, by his own admission, did not come to a final ideological break with the party until 1950. His status in the intervening years is not easily defined. If his testimony is accepted, he was not, to use the conventional cliche, a "card-carrying member" of the Communist Party. Does it follow from this, however, that he was not a Communist? The question illuminates a real difficulty inherent in many of the contemporary non-Communist oath requirements, in the answers given to congressional committee inquiries respecting Communist Party affiliation and in perjury prosecutions which may ensue. It is never easy to prove nonmembership in an organization; and it is perhaps even more difficult for one who was once a member to prove that he is so no longer.

It is absurd to suppose that all actual members of the Communist Party carry cards or have their names and aliases inscribed on rolls waiting to be photostated by the FBI or the agents of the Un-American Activities Committee. Undoubtedly there are members of whose membership there is no record anywhere. Undoubtedly, too, there are party affiliates, or crypto-Communists—not to speak of former Communists whose withdrawal from the party was sedulously publicized—who are as devoted and subservient to it as any of its candid members. Thus, for example, it is reported in Monday's Daily Worker that "Ben Gold, president of the International Fur and Leather Workers Union, yesterday announced his resignation from the Communist Party in order to comply with the Taft-Hartley law... Gold at the same time made it clear that he did not abandon the convictions gained in nearly 30 years of membership in the Communist Party."

There are, of course, members of the Communist Party who follow its tergiversations blindly and accept a kind of discipline that no genuine American political party could or would think of attempting to impose. There are "nonmembers" who do the same. There is an "organizational" and an "ideological" relationship to the party. And sometimes, we suspect, there is a relationship that conceals itself in vociferous anti-communism. Those who would undertake to register all the Communists in the country might do well to watch out for these pitfalls.

Nylon Again

Nylon is again the word of the hour as Government step-up orders on parachutes are accompanied by deluges of reorders at the hosiery mills. Nylon hosiery was the first offensive of the scare buyers—as in 1941. Thus has one of technology's by-products become a seemingly indispensable part of American life. Yet, strange as it may seem, life went on before there was nylon. Hence hosiery producers are reported doing some just-in-case research into the good old days when women—at least those who could afford them—wore silk stockings and silk underwear. For today, unlike the early 1940s, Japanese silk imports are available, although raw silk is reported to have gone up in price around 50 percent since the Korean war began. However, it is said to be easier to switch mill machinery to handle silk than to rayon.

The near-panic over nylon, foolish as it may seem to those impervious both to vanity and the economics of the hosiery industry, is a tribute to man's ability to outdo nature. DuPont executives recently stated they didn't set out to invent nylon, that it was a natural development of other resources. However, it filled certain needs better than nature's products and it became the fiber of the decade, even a notable social force in its contribution to class leveling. This is something to remember at a time when man's ingenuity faces further challenge before the growing drain on natural resources.

Crackdown

Just as the purpose of government is to govern, so the business of a President is to lead and to brook no trespass upon his prerogative. Under our system he is the only representative of all the people. Mr. Truman has reaffirmed his role in his crackdown, first on Secretary Matthews and now on General MacArthur, and in so doing has cleared the air both at home and abroad. General MacArthur was creating bewilderment at home and a growing dismay in the United Nations. He was giving the impression that he was a law unto himself. He got away with it in the Roosevelt Administration, but Mr. Truman has shown that he is made of sterner stuff than Mr. Roosevelt, and the people, whose institutions rest upon the principle of civilian supremacy, have reason to be grateful that he is.

Voices have been raised on Capitol Hill that the President has imposed a gag. The publication of the MacArthur speech alongside the news of the Truman action disposes of the charge in this particular matter. This was a presidential gesture, and a gesture which had to be made before and not after the event, for any ex post facto statement from the White House would have served no purpose except to emphasize that General MacArthur was on his own. This would have been an intolerable situation. What the President has done is to reestablish discipline. Without a doubt the views of General MacArthur are worthy of consideration, but he is out of order in interpreting the policy which he is administering in a way that does violence, whether wittingly or not, to the presidential intent. He has mistaken his proconsular role as that of first consul, and we have confidence that the American people will see it that way.

Wherein lay the error of General MacArthur? On June 27 the President ordered the Seventh Fleet to neutralize Formosa—by preventing a Communist attack on Formosa and, as a "corollary," by preventing a Nationalist attack on the Chinese mainland. He said nothing about defending Formosa. Yet the emphasis in Tokyo has been on defense, and, that being so, a near-alliance has been rapidly growing up with Chiang Kai-shek. It was celebrated by the highly publicized MacArthur visit to Chiang Kai-shek. The mission, and the theatrics attendant upon it, made the policy-makers in Washington swallow hard, though for the sake of appearances, they tried to make out that everything was hunky-dory. Then General MacArthur went too far in a flamboyant speech for delivery to the Veterans of Foreign Wars which he never bothered to clear with the Defense Department and which went out a week ahead of the event. Having already forced the pace on the President, General MacArthur spoke about the defense of Formosa at greater length, warmed up the close relations he had established with Chiang Kai-shek by his hostile references to the Chinese Communists (though without mentioning either) and told the veterans how the Orientals loved an "aggressive" policy! There was not a word in the speech about the United Nations, though the policy had been reported to the United Nations and its investigation and consideration invited in furthering the policy.

The difference between the President and General MacArthur is the whole width of the Formosa Straits. Yet there is bland wonderment in Tokyo about the President's attitude. All he has done is to remind General MacArthur who's the boss, get the Truman policy back on the beam so as to remove all the misunderstanding, and stop MacArthur from boxing him in. That is all, and it is about time. What the United States is trying to do in Formosa is to keep the island out of war, not to push it in. It is a most delicate operation but it was not being helped by the slant that General MacArthur was spectacularly giving to it. The incident is again a reminder of a tendency familiar in our history of forgetting policy when policy has entered a military area.

Morale Or Myth?

Speaking early last month before a subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Lieut. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith observed that

> It will pay us to sit down and analyze why the Communists in North Korea are fighting like the devil and why those who are defending democracy do not seem to be doing so well. Certainly the Communistic propaganda has been extremely effective.

General Smith was reiterating what was being reported at the time by correspondents at the Korean battlefronts. The burden of innumerable dispatches was that while the Communists were exhibiting a fanatical enthusiasm, the attitude of the American soldiers was one of bewilderment or cynicism. The American boys, it appeared, were unable to understand why they had been so suddenly transferred from a pleasant and easy occupation duty to fight and die in the nightsoil and rice paddies of an obscure Oriental country of whose existence they had hardly been aware.

What may be the real answer to the problem is given in an Associated Press dispatch from the Taegu front about a North Korean lieutenant colonel who surrendered to the American air forces. This officer, a veteran of the Chinese Communist armies, is now said to be helping the American bomber forces to locate and annihilate Red artillery emplacements. The burden of his story is that many of the North Koreans would like nothing better than an opportunity to surrender. What deters them is, for one thing, the presence of secret political agents in their own ranks. No North Korean soldier, the officer said, dares to confide his feelings to another for fear that the other may be a secret agent.

This story has a good deal of plausibility. The condition it describes doubtless holds true for all the satellite armies and perhaps even for the Red army itself. The truth is that no Communist regime is a pleasant thing to live under; and the methods of Communist rule are nowhere such as to endear the masters to their subjects. Thus the supposed fanaticism of the North Korean masses turns out to be merely the familiar regimen of terror.

Perhaps it also explains why the North Koreans have not unloaded their gripes or vented their homesickness to the correspondents of Tass and Pravda and the London Daily Worker with the same boyish abandon that the GIs have shown when interviewed by American correspondents. No doubt the North Korean troops have been more scientifically and intensively "indoctrinated" than ours, but we begin to suspect that political "indoctrination" is not quite as important as many military experts and editorial writers appear to believe.

Eavesdroppers

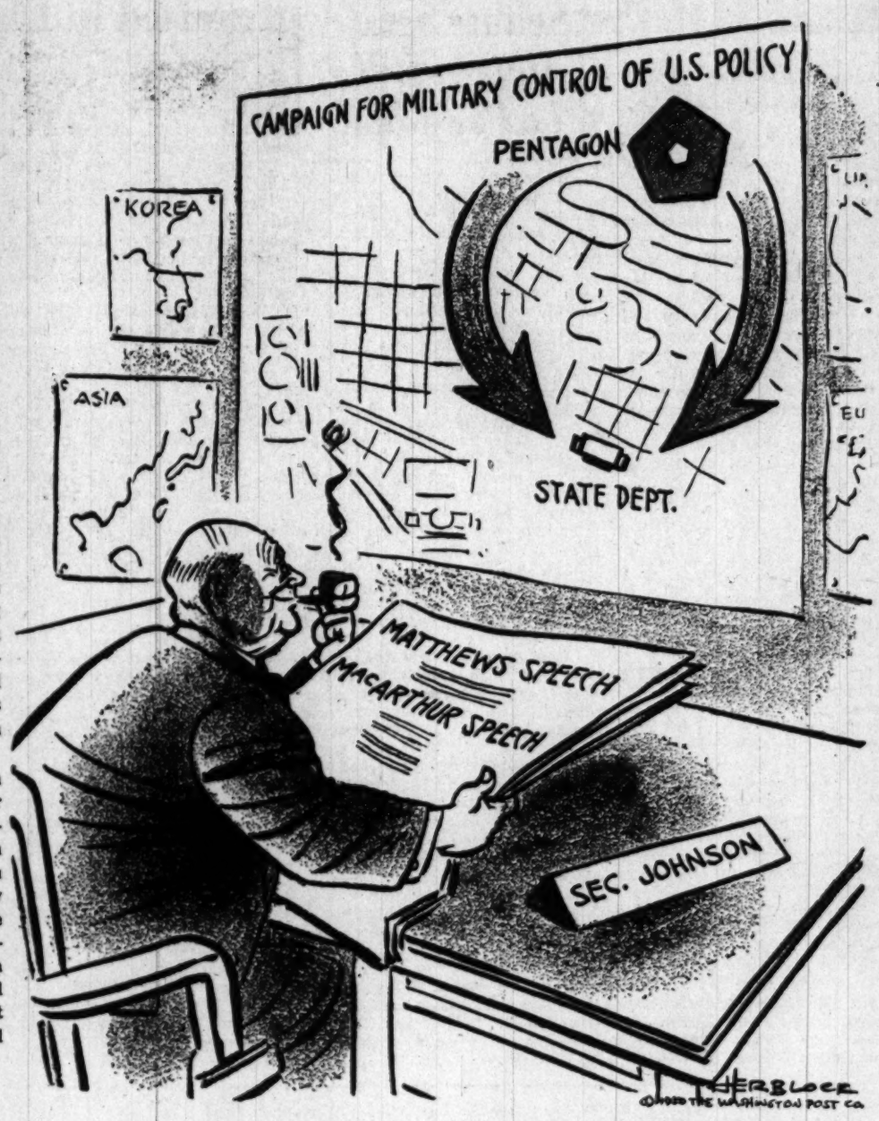
Enough has been adduced in the Senate investigation of wiretapping to show that Police Lieut. Joseph Shimon was a very busy man prior to and during the Hughes-Brewster controversy in 1947. Whether or not Senator Brewster was formally mixed up in the attempts to eavesdrop on the telephone conversations of Howard Hughes and of Attorney Hugh Fulton—and Mr. Brewster's explanations so far have not been exactly convincing—it is apparent that a great deal of promiscuous wiretapping was going on. The disclosures fully warrant the spotlight the Senate District Committee is giving them. The Police Department has taken no action against Lieutenant Shimon, and the Department of Justice report of a year or so ago apparently was flubbed by the United States attorney. Even though a Federal grand jury earlier this month declined to indict Lieutenant Shimon before the statute of limitations expired, it is imperative for Congress and the public to know just what has been going on. Incidentally, in our opinion, there also is plenty of ground for police trial board action against Lieutenant Shimon.

The fact is that there is no legal basis for wiretapping of this sort, and even the wiretapping engaged in by the FBI in espionage and kidnapping cases rests on shadowy ground. The Federal Communications Act states flatly: "No person, not being authorized by the sender, shall intercept any communication and divulge . . . the contents." A letter from President Roosevelt in 1941 commenting on another piece of proposed legislation is used by the Attorney General to authorize wiretapping in criminal cases. But the Communications Act has not been changed, and the Supreme Court has interpreted the act to mean that there shall be no tapping and divulgence even if the divulgence is only to another person in a law enforcement agency. The water has been muddied, to be sure, by a later mischievous decision by District Judge Holtzoff. But, in any case, as a private hired agent Lieutenant Shimon could hardly have tapped wires for any purpose except to divulge the information he obtained.

What all this points to is the need for clarification of the law by Congress. It is obvious that a great deal of wiretapping is practiced, not only by law enforcement bodies, but also by Federal agencies having little relation to law enforcement and by individuals such as Lieutenant Shimon, acting in a private capacity. The reason is that there now is no middle ground between an absolute ban on wiretapping and the flagrant evasion of the law by private busybodies. What is necessary is legal recognition that there is a need for wiretapping in extremely serious crimes but that it must be conducted within the search and seizure provisions of the Fourth Amendment. In other words, wiretapping ought to be permitted only when law enforcement agencies obtain what is tantamount to a court warrant.

Chairman Neely of the Senate District Committee has indicated that a bill to control wiretapping will be offered this week. Reportedly, it will be modeled on the New York law, which authorizes wiretapping by law enforcement agencies but only with the assent of a judge in each specific instance. Such a law would not, of course, sanction the kind of private snooping for hire that Lieutenant Shimon has engaged in. We hope that Congress will take up the matter and that it will make whatever clarification it decides upon applicable not only to the District but to the Nation at large. A law which limited wiretapping to certain types of cases with specific court approval would both meet a need and make it easier to crack down on illegal wiretapping. There already has been far too much of this indiscriminate invasion of telephone communications by "private ears," and Congress ought to slap stiff criminal penalties on those who take the law into their own hands.

The Big Battle



Letters To The Editor

Communications must be addressed to the editor and must carry the complete name and street address of the writer, though pen names will be permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters of less than 200 words will be given perference, and all letters are subject to condensation. No communication can be returned.

Statehood Stall

Russian propaganda lays claim to Alaska and repudiates the Czarist sale of "Seward's Ice Box." It would definitely be an anti-Communist move to apply democratic forms of State government to the people of Alaska.

Are our Senators, Democratic and Republican, quaking in their boots so badly—in fear of Stalin—that they dare not give statehood to Alaska? Does "Uncle Joe" wield a whip that long? Congressmen and Senators are finding every excuse under the sun, to the glee of the Reds, for not allowing Alaska to become a State. Maybe Senator McCarthy won't look too far outside the United States Senate to find those who are serving the interests of the Kremlin.

Equal Rights Bill

Your issue of July 20 reported the remarks of Representative Katherine St. George of New York, who is a principal sponsor of the equal rights amendment, at a recent rally of the National Woman's Party. These remarks were concerned mainly with strategy and program for securing passage of the equal rights amendment in a future session of Congress. In the course of her comments Mrs. St. George is reported to have said that "women would not provide equal pay for equal work under the amendment."

I do not wish to go into a general discussion of the equal rights amendment here. My position is well known. But I do want to make it clear that the passage of the equal rights amendment would not provide equal pay for equal work. The payment of wages, other than the minimum wage in certain occupations or in interstate commerce, is not now governed by legal regulation.

There is nothing in the law to prevent an employer from paying a woman as much as a man if he wants to, or if he has agreed to under union contracts. Therefore, there is no present discrimination by law against women in the matter of wages. The discrimination lies in practice and custom, an outgrowth of the undervaluation of women's skills and their weak bargaining position. Even if the equal rights amendment were passed, wages, except as regulated specifically by law, would remain a matter of voluntary action. The operation of the equal rights amendment would be upon the Federal and State Governments, not upon individuals.

Anyone who is really in earnest about getting equal pay for women should rally to the support of H. R. 1584, and S. 706, both of which are now under consideration in the Congress.

In Security's Name

Under the guise of "security," numerous sins are being committed. The welfare of the Nation is of supreme importance, but the right of an individual to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness," is one of supreme importance, too. The Constitution does not allow one to be condemned without trial, it does not permit one to be judged guilty of charges of which he has no knowledge. But that is happening in our Government at this time.

Today our Government agencies are accused of everything short of treason by irresponsible persons. The faith of the American people in the Government is being undermined by vilifiers seeking self-aggrandizement. In order to restore this waning faith of the people, agencies are forced to sacrifice all "upon whom the breath of suspicion falls."

How this must give "aid and comfort" to our enemies! Those enemies in our midst are united on a definite plan of action and are slowly but inevitably putting it into force. The ghosts of Marx and Lenin must be chuckling over the distrust and disunity that decadent capitalists are causing among themselves—preparing the way for communism.

Now is the time to cease seeing enemies on all sides, to stop this persecution of innocent people under the label of "security of the Nation." The American way is to let a man know what charges have been brought against him and give him a chance to defend himself. Otherwise, what we condemn in others we shall find being used by ourselves.

Roscoe Conklin Bruce

This writer regrets the lack of notice or tribute on the occasion of the burial of Roscoe Conklin Bruce on August 19. For more than a decade Mr. Bruce headed the colored part of the school system of Washington, D. C., yet only a few school people were at his funeral.

Bruce was the son of the only Negro who occupied a seat in the United States Senate, and from history we learn he contributed greatly while in the halls of Congress. His son, the late Roscoe C. Bruce, was a talented graduate of Harvard University and one of the youngest persons to hold an administrative post in the Washington school system. He was a first assistant superintendent at 30.

"Ladies From Hell"

With regard to Victoria L. Munro's letter of August 25, it would appear that the lady has a very short memory.

The British were fighting in World War II for two years before the Americans with their customary fanfare sent in ground troops. The Americans have been fighting in Korea just two months and already British ground troops are on their way to help.

Also for the lady's information, quite a big percentage of Scottish regiments are made up of men who are not of Scottish birth, namely, Englishmen, Welshmen and Irishmen. This is not the first time that the British have come to the aid of their American comrades, which is as it should be, if peace is ever to come to this troubled world.

J. McINTYRE.
Silver Spring.

She says that Scotsmen are being sent to relieve Britons and that they are useful in their picturesqueness. In the first place Scots, though many desire independence from England, still consider themselves Britons and their value lies in that there has never been a better fighting force than the "Ladies From Hell."

The greater quarrel is with her statement that the British have been accustomed to sitting back and waiting until they could enter more or less safely and gain the greater glory as being the winner in the final stages. If any nation could deserve such a poor report it is our own. The British fought long and hard in both wars before the United States came into them. Don't let anyone who has not felt the full weight of war sit in this country and call other people cowards and glory-seekers.

DANIEL M. CHESNEY.

I should like to point out what the sending of this small force of Britons to Korea means to the British. The British have fought two major world wars in this century that have cost them far more in proportion to their national income than any other so-called victorious nation. Rather than see freedom disappear from this earth, Great Britain has sacrificed her standard of living.

Now, when the British were beginning to enjoy things that this country has never been denied, they are being faced with the reimposition of all the restrictions that they have struggled for the last five years to shed. That's what sharing "the glory and the laurels" means to the British.

Marriage Trend

Malvina Lindsay's column of June 15 has been called to my attention. Miss Lindsay quotes me as predicting a resumption of the historic upward trend in marriage in the 1950s. This quotation is incorrect. Actually, those are my very words with regard to divorce.

I have not yet carried my studies on marriage to the point where I would be in a position to make a prediction as to the future course of the marriage rate. Indeed, it is very unlikely that such analysis will appear until sometime in 1951 when my forthcoming book on marriage and divorce is published. However, it is certain that my findings could not possibly support the statement which Miss Lindsay has attributed to me. It is evident that no upswing in the marriage rate can be expected in the early 1950's.

Irresponsible Congress

Wonderful and appalling—that's our Congress! Handing out billions to our boys to save democracy in Korea, and throwing democracy to the Franco wolves here on the Hill. Thursday's proposals seemed to be the limit: cut down ECA, cut down Point IV, cut out support of the U. N. children's fund, but toss the millions to Franco! And Friday the boys were doing it! All but Virginia's Howard Smith, who apparently alone was trying to stem the flood.

Hadn't we better do something about Congress? We elected them to represent our interests, but when they show such wanton irresponsibility should we review this business of representative government to see what's the matter with it? Maybe the boys would act their age better if they were under the TV spotlight. Perhaps we should set up prerequisites for candidacy; doctors, lawyers, teachers must have proof of training before they may practice—is skilled statesmanship less important to our welfare?

Furor Over Matthews

By Marquis Childs

War With What?

TWO SPEECHES were made over the weekend that illustrate, on the one hand, the fantastic folly and, on the other, the last foothold of wisdom in our time. Any semblance between Winston Churchill and our Secretary of the Navy, Francis Matthews, is due to the purely coincidental fact that they are both in public life.

Churchill in a political speech in England urged the Western world to use whatever time remains to try to prepare the defenses of the West. In other words, he was saying that time is the most precious commodity we have.

This was a melancholy echo of what Churchill has been saying for the past four years. His theme repeated again and again and again has been the mortal peril to the West in a continuation of the drift that ignores the realities both of possible peace and probable war.

Largely for reasons of politics, Matthews, a successful lawyer in Omaha, Nebr., was made Secretary of the Navy. Under the domination of Louis Johnson, Secretary of Defense, it has been a pretty empty office.

Now Matthews steps out of the obscurity into which he had lapsed after his appointment to recommend in a speech in Boston a preventive war. When a storm of protest was kicked up with the disclosure that the speech had not apparently been cleared by any agency of Government, Matthews said he was speaking solely for himself.

TO BEGIN with, of course that is impossible. If he had spoken in Omaha, as a respected citizen in the community, his words would hardly have been heard across the Missouri River.

Because he happens to be Secretary of the Navy his words are heard around the world. You can be sure that tonight a hundred Soviet transmitters are broadcasting them to every corner of the earth. The Communist propagandists would never miss an opening like that.

But, in my opinion, the propaganda consequences are in a sense incidental. What is so ominous about Secretary Matthews' proposal is that it indicates a desire to bring on a war at a moment when the grave weaknesses of the United States and western Europe in almost every department have been revealed.

This would include Secretary Matthews' own department as pared down on the orders of his chief, the Secretary of Defense. It would include the fearful deficiencies in vital materials resulting from failure to set aside even minimum stockpiles. It would include a shortage of trained military manpower that cannot be concealed as western Europe pleads for divisions of trained American troops.

In the past the hints for a preventive war have come from the more doctrinaire Air Force generals. This has been on the thesis that the B-36 bombers could carry atomic bombs to a number of Russian cities and thereby destroy the industrial potential of the Soviet Union.

One thing this has done is to encourage the belief in a quick and easy war. It has tended to spread the illusion that another war can be won by a kind of magic performed by a few highly trained technicians; and with quick victory leaving us free to go back again to the pursuits of peace.

IF SECRETARY Matthews has any thesis to recommend a preventive war other than this magic removal of a threat to our security, he did not tell us what it was. Responsible military leaders have said from time to time in the recent past that a global war with Soviet Russia might last 30 years if this country were fortunate enough to avoid being seriously thrown off balance by an initial attack.

A vital political opposition would demand to know what was back of Matthew's statement. Does it reflect in any way Secretary Johnson's view? Or in any degree the views of men in uniform?

Last week as Secretary Johnson came out of the White House, he was asked about a statement made in this column. I reported that Democratic Senators were deeply concerned over the continuing controversy between Johnson and Secretary of State Dean Acheson; a controversy which had delayed the taking of essential steps for coordination of military and diplomatic policy.

Johnson replied that he had never spoken except in a kindly way about Acheson. They were cooperating, he said. This is not enough. The public is entitled to know the facts. The Matthews incident has revealed how little cooperation there is between the State and Defense Departments on major policy in a world that teeters on the abyss.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

China's Interest In Korea

WHILE IT is very difficult to know what to believe about the reports of military movements by the Red Chinese, there is no doubt that their diplomacy has become markedly more active in the past week. It is, I think, significant that Mr. Chou En Lai's protest to the United Nations on Formosa was followed almost immediately by charges of American bombing beyond the Yalu River which in the west marks the frontier between China and Korea.

Lippmann

The importance of the incident lies in the fact that the Chinese government has at this time chosen to call attention to its own frontier with Korea. We are probably witnessing the preliminary to Red China's coming forward out of obscurity to be one of the acknowledged principals in the Korean business. This would be probable even if, as is not unknown in strategic bombing, a pilot lost his way. But the probability would be much higher—that Mr. Chou En Lai is calling attention deliberately to the Chinese interest in Korea—if, as our Air Force commanders believe, his charges are fabricated.

THE RED Chinese have been talking a lot about Formosa and very little about Korea until it became reasonably certain that the North Korean forces had failed in their attempt to overrun the peninsula. We can say this much without indulging in the cruel and phony optimism which some of the Army's public relations officers have dished out during the retreat to the beachhead. For even on the worst conceivable, and we may now hope the most improbable, estimate of what could happen, the North Koreans cannot now obtain a military decision which ends the war in their favor.

There is reason to think that the Russian-Chinese-North Korean plan called for a military conquest during August—to coincide with Mr. Malik's return to the Security Council. This plan went wrong, not only in its timing but in its calculation of military forces. The North Koreans alone have proved not to be strong enough to settle the Korean question. Realizing this, the Peiping government is compelled to come forward. For over Korea, which is of only secondary interest to them, the Russians are not likely to commit their own forces against the Americans.

It is not impossible that the Chinese might, using the alleged bombings across the Yalu River as a pretense, reinforce the North Koreans. But it is very certain, I think, that Red China is intending from now on to play a principal part in the negotiations which must eventually take place to settle the future of Korea.

SPEAKING entirely by hindsight, we can now begin to see that one of our cardinal errors in the Far East has been our failure to grasp the critical importance of Korea in the foreign policy of any Chinese government, no matter what its ideology. Our military people, judging rightly that Korea was not a vital interest of the United States, seemed to have overlooked the fact that for a thousand years Korea has been a vital interest of China's and of Japan's.

The State Department, which was right in insisting upon the conflict of Chinese and Russian interests in Manchuria and Inner Asia, seems to have overlooked the fact that on Korea, ever since Russia reached the Pacific Ocean, China and Russia have had a common interest as against Japan or against any other power on the ocean which was allied with Japan. As long ago as 1896, after Japan had obtained Korea by defeating China, the famous Chinese statesman, Li Hung Chang, went to Russia and signed a secret treaty with Prince Lobanov, of which Article I is virtually identical with the Soviet-Chinese treaty of last February.

It is a fair guess, I think, that while Secretary Acheson was talking about Soviet designs on Manchuria and Mongolia, Mao and Stalin, Chou En Lai and Vishinsky, were agreeing that they had a common interest in expelling Western, and particularly American, influence from Korea. The Chinese interest in Korea is if anything greater than the Russian. Across the Yalu River from Korea lies Manchuria, and the choice of Korea as a field of action was an exceedingly astute way of consolidating the Soviet-Chinese alliance.

WE CAN also understand better than we did two months ago—in our first bewilderment and ignorance of the Korean problem—why Nehru—who through his brilliant Ambassador in Peiping is sure to be better informed than we are—has insisted that the recognition of Red China is essential to a Korean settlement. We have been disposed to treat the demand for Chinese recognition as mere blackmail and, indeed as Mr. Malik has argued it, that is what it is. But Nehru is not an appeaser by instinct or by principle. His coupling of China with Korea is a recognition of the deeper and the lasting reality of the matter, which is that the Chinese interest in Korea is greater than that of any other foreign power. This has always been the case. It will always be the case. For in its geography Korea is to China what Florida is to the United States. It is a peninsula which in unfriendly hands, like the Japanese, opened up China to Japanese conquest.

THE PRACTICAL conclusion I would draw from all this is that in any plans we decide to propose for the future of Korea we should make it our premise that China, regardless of ideology, and that Japan, regardless of her defeat, occupation, and disarmament, are the two principals with whom a united Korea, if it is to endure, must come to terms. Russia has an interest in Korea too. But it is secondary to China's interest. We have an interest in Korea, but it is a vicarious interest. As long as we have to remain in Japan, and until Japan recovers her independence and can protect not only her territory but also her interests, we have an interest in Korea.

Brewster Was 'Tap' Victim in 1947, Says Shimon

wire tapping activity. Testimony by witnesses other than Shimon has suggested one major wire-tapping episode, the tapping of Howard Hughes' associates phones in 1947, was for the Brewster Committee. Brewster and Shimon have denied this.

The reverse-English disclosure that Shimon found a tap on Brewster's phone when he was trailing Lappin to hotel suites of Hughes' associates came to light in previously secret testimony given by Shimon to the committee.

Senator Claude Pepper (D., Fla.), chairman, made all previous closed-door hearing transcripts available to reporters after a morning hearing in which Shimon was heard for the first time in public.

Lappin said again last night he never shadowed Senator Brewster, and declared "he was being picked out as a scape goat." He would not comment otherwise for quotation on Shimon's testimony about him.

Shimon was special investigator for the United States Attorney for nine years, until last fall when he was ordered back to a precinct following the Police Department's probe of his wire tapping. The department report, made public by Pepper, included statements of witnesses, since quizzed in public hearings, and a Detective Bureau recommendation that the report on Shimon be made the basis for trial board action.

It was from the record of his earlier testimony rather than yesterday's hearing that the vintage flavors of two decades of Washington wire tapping came out.

For example: Shimon reported wire tapping was regularly done in the police department up until 1940 and as late as 1944, the late Col. Edward Kelly, Chief of Police, told Shimon wire tapping was "his own business" so long as he did not wiretap wires of gamblers and prostitutes.

Fumble Can Reveal 'Tap'

Shimon said it's impossible to detect a good tap, but fumbled wires of a recording machine can give it away. He said when a tap was found, telephone employes usually told the subscriber there was trouble on the line.

And Shimon told a racy story of trailing Lappin, a story probably to be gone over today when Shimon and Lappin will be witnesses, along with Mrs. Frances Dustin, the secretary who Senator Brewster said handed over the expense money he paid to Shimon to shadow Lappin.

Shimon, in the earlier closed hearing, said his trailing of Lappin led to his tapping of telephones at the Mayflower and Carlton Hotel suites identified by officers who listened for him as those of Howard Hughes' aides during the millionaire plane maker's appearance before the Brewster committee investigating war-time controls.

Barrett Denies Order

Shimon said his order to report to Brewster's office came through police channels, either from the chief's office or his executive officer. Maj. Robert J. Barrett, chief of Metropolitan Police, has denied sending Shimon to Brewster.

Shimon continued:

"I went to see the Senator. He said he was disturbed. He became conscious of a man keeping pretty good tabs on him, watching him, following him. He saw the man in his hotel. He saw him outside his office. He saw him in the street.

"I asked him what he thought the fellow was up to and he said he did not know. He said sometimes there were cranks. I asked for a description of the fellow and if he knew anything about him. He said 'he's probably out in the hall or somewhere around the room now.' He said 'he is always around here.'. I said 'you walk out and I will be close by so I can get a look at him' and we walked out.

"I told him not to walk too close to me if he saw the man, kind of nod and to give me some indication that was the fellow and then go back in the office and let me look him over. In one of the halls or some office here, he pointed the man out and I recognized him right away. I knew him as 'Chick' Lappin, and I went back to the Senator's office and I said 'I know that fellow.'

Pretty Nasty Case

"He asked what I knew about him. I said 'well, he was mixed up in a pretty big blackmail case here. It was one of the worst in our history. It was a pretty nasty case, the Dean and Wampler case.

[The Dean and Wampler case was a sensation in the early '30's. Edward B. Dean, then in his 80's, had been a real estate dealer. T. Morris Wampler was his attorney. Wampler drew an 18-month term and a $10,000 fine on a charge of evading income tax payments; the government accused Wampler of procuring women to perpetrate a badger game on Dean and of profiting extensively from the payments Dean made.]

Mr. Dean owned an apartment house and he called and he said he was having trouble," Shimon related. "He said he was being shaken down by women. Every time he met a new girl, after he had a date or two with her. . . . it would cost him $40,000, $50,000, or $20,000, and he wanted to put a stop to it.

Shimon said he got the first details, others handled the case, but "Lappin was one of the procurers of the women."

"How did you get to know about it," asked Gerhard P. van Arkel, committee counsel.

Shimon replied, "From what I was told by the men handling the case." He said they included a former partner of his, Harry Britton, and also Lieut. Earl Hartman.

"Quite An Operator"

Shimon said he himself did not see Lappin in connection with the Dean-Wampler case, but "what I knew, Lappin hed been around. Lappin is quite an operator in town. He is identified with our con men.

"I told the senator at that time 'Well, I would not worry about this fellow, I know I can handle this situation. We will cover him and take care of whatever he is doing. I mean if it is anything he is up to, we will put him were he belongs, just forget about him.'"

Shimon said he asked Brewster if he had evidence of "an office prowl," if he had lost anything out of his office, if he had any trouble with his telephone, Shimon added.

"I checked his phones there, just a slow check to see if they had been tampered with, see if anybody had put a mike in one of them that would cut into them at any place, looked at the position of the screws to see if any shiny spots were in there, anybody had been in there, examined locks . . . to see if anybody had been working with a steel jimmy.

Checked at Mayflower

"The office looked pretty clean; I asked the Senator where he lived. He said the Mayflower . . . I told him I would make a check . . .

I made a check . . . I found a tap on his phone in a box. I cut it off. I hoped that somebody would come back and put it on. They never did.

"I could have traced it, but in order to trace, I would have had to alert the entire hotel. The only way to trace those things you know is to put a buzzer on it, then go down to the switchboard and call for the supervisor and she rings everyone until you pick it up and that would be just a little too much publicity for an investigation that I was going to make.

"I could not imagine what Lappin would be interested in a Senator for. His specialty, in my mind, was always the woman angle. I did not want to say to the Senator 'Well, how about your love life.' I thought that would be getting a little personal . . . but the thought was in my mind, maybe the Senator has got a girl.

"I looked that over, but I around the Senate here, and when I picked Lappin up the next day around the Senate here, and when Brewster left he went shortly behind. Brewster went to the Mayflower Hotel. Lappin went to the Mayflower Hotel, then to the Carlton Hotel . . . picked up the house phone, talked to somebody there. I was able to get the location of the room through a bellboy. Lappin went upstairs. He was there a short time and came down. From there, he went home.

Asked for Specific Room

"I went back to the hotel, went up on that floor where he made the call, looked the rooms over. There was a back suite, connecting rooms on each side; I want downstairs, asked for a specific room on the left side that would normally have a connecting door. I went back there after I rented a room.

"The next day I picked Lappin up again here around the Capitol building. The Senator was here quite late. I left Lappin here, went back to the hotel. I figured he would show eventually. . . . I tried to bite that wire into that room, but the best I could do, if I recall now, there was a phone hookup to the bathroom. So . . . I used a highly sensitive microphone.

"Lappin came in that night . . . I could not pick up what he said or anything about it. The next day I believe I assigned one of the ment to cover it.

"But the tap, he said, was not any good.

"I continued down here (the Capitol). I kind of kept an eye on Lappin. The Senator did a pretty good job of dodging him.

Shimon said next time he went to the Carlton the room next door to the one he had rented was vacant, "so I was kind of surprised."

Occupied By Hughes' Aide

Shimon said he did not check the register on the room, but at the time of his testimony knew it was occupied by a Mr. Dietrich. Noah Dietrich was one of the aides of Howard Hughes. "I know now that he was the man that moved from the Carlton to the Mayflower. As I say I never checked those listings . . . I concentrated on Lappin."

Shimon said he did not tell the hotel what he wanted a room for, but "they know me at the hotel, most of the clerks. . . . All those hotels were in my old district. They would not ask any questions.

"I really was not interested in the occupants, until I could find out what Lappin was doing, I was looking in for . . . some reason for following . . . the Senator

After the Carlton tap turned out to be a dud Shimon said "I picked up Lappin at the Mayflower. He was talking on the phone. Then he made some calls in a drug store off the lobby. He used the end booth. I put a tap on it. . . . I ran that one (the listening phone) to the mezzanine floor."

"After I determined where he called from the house phone, I moved up on that floor, as close to that particular room as I could get. I could not get close to it. I was at the end of the hall."

Shimon said that at the Mayflower he had trouble putting in the listening device; the wires did not run according to blueprints the box that should have controlled was not there, and he tried to get an induction mike in their walls, through an airshaft, but it was not a success. But finally he picked out the phone, and "I put a tap on that and it was covered from then on. I believe it was in from August 4 to August 11. That is the record I was shown at the Grand Jury, the record of the hotel."

Shimon said the officers listening for him were just to determine the identity of the contact Lappin was making.

Van Arkel asked "you told them to take down only anything that would refer to Lappin."

Shimon said "Yes. Now I described Lappin. They saw the picture. Lapin does not have any teeth. You can't miss him on the telephone. He could not pronounce names. I think he has teeth, but he does not wear them."

Shimon said he told his men to be on the lookout or a man who talked like he had a mouthful of mush.

Shimon said that from the listening officers he got some information that mikht have made him think they had heard Lappin, on advice of counsel he would not say what the information was.

Shimon said he was paid by Brewster's office for his expenses of $225 to $235.

"I called the Senator's office. I talked to Mrs. Dustin, his secretary. She told me the Senator was not in the city, but could she take care of any matter and I identified myself.

"I said I was doing something for the Senator and had incurred some expenses, and I asked her would she get in touch with the Senator and tell him . . . She said she would let me know or send it to me. Anyway I got it from her. I would say it was about $225 or $235.

Shimon said he never did find out what was Lappin's motive or intent.

"There was nothing that I learned that was of any value in connection with Lappin." Shimon said he did not learn who Lappin was working for or who was paying him. He said he ended the Mayflower tap when Lappin stepped out of the picture.

In other testimony on August 18, Shimon said he learned about wire tapping by seeing other men do it after joining the Police Department in 1929.

"There is nothing to it," he said. "All you have to do is see it done once . . . in present work, if I were looking for a criminal . . . I could not locate, I would get into the wires of his sweetheart or somebody to find out where he was."

Shimon recalled his first big wire-tapping job in 1935 or 1936 in pursuit of a safe-cracking mob. He said Inspector Floyd Truscott, recently retired, had the wire tap made. Two squads, Truscott's and Shimon's cooperated, Shimon said.

Van Arkel asked whether it was generally known in the department that "you were using wire tapping."

Shimon said "oh, why, of course. In fact . . . I was directed several times to tap wires for other squads. For instance I remember one instance on the robbery squad with Lieut. John Fowler . . . All I did was the installation. I did not sit and listen. His own men did that.

"Another occasion was Inspector Bryant . . . He and his partner, I believe it was Sergeant McCarthy were on the Narcotics and Drug squad. They were working on a criminal abortion ring here . . . There was a daughter and mother operating . . . They requested that the wire of that apartment be tapped . . . I made the installation . . ."

Van Arkel asked: "Were you generally known in the department as the one who was adept in placing taps. "Oh, no," Shimon replied: "Inspector Truscott and Lieut. (Earl) Hartman . . . handled their own taps. Of course I had a free lance squad . . . We worked generally over town, hotel squads, vagrants, bums . . .

Worked With Federal Men

"We worked with the Federal narcotics men, too. We had a tap . . . which resulted in clearing up a narcotic ring . . . It was . . . around 15th and Euclid."

Shimon also recalled Lieutenant Hartman and Lieutenant Truscott tapped the phones of gamblers, which resulted in conspiracy indictments of a dozen gamblers and five policemen. The case was thrown out because the wire tapping was ruled illegal.

Shimon said he worked with a headset and a pair of wires. The wires were tapped into a telephone box. He got the pair of poles to be tapped by phoning the repair department and asking for everything on such and such a phone. "We learned that trick from the telephone company . . . The girl on the repair desk usually thought you were one of the linemen, I guess . . . It saved a lot of work. For instance, you could go into the box and put a headset and have somebody call the number and run down each pair and pick it up that way, but if you got into a box with two or three thousand pairs, you could spend a few hours there."

Senator Harry Darby (R., Kans.) asked "you learned to do that from whom?"

"From the man who was assigned to the detective bureau, a former telephone man," said Shimon.

Shimon said the pair numbers are usually marked on the box,

Slot Machine Ban Approved

was defeated by overwhelming voice vote.

If the bill becomes law, therefore, a drive to force the machines from posts all over the country is likely.

Sutton argued that soldiers and sailors weren't really gambling by playing the slots at their clubs—they were making a "contribution" toward buying much-needed athletic and other equipment. But Representative Prince Preston (D., Ga.), a sponsor of the bill, and a number of others all contended such an exemption would "invite collusion between the gamblers and the clubs" and that the gamblers would get a big part of the take.

Representative Walter S. Baring (D., Nev.) lost two efforts to amend the bill. By 78 to 23 the House refused to wipe out the requirement for new State laws where gambling is legal. By 64 to 28 it refused to exclude shipments back to manufacturers for repair of machines where legally used.

The bill originated at the Attorney General's Conference on Crime which met here last February. It is designed to help the States help themselves in enforcing antigambling laws. It leaves up to the States enforcement of local laws against the one-armed bandits and the companion pinball machines. But it uses the Federal police power to halt the machines at the State line, if a State doesn't want them in.

Since all the machines are now made by a small number of manufactures concentrated in Chicago, another part of the bill is expected to prove effective in driving the one-armed bandits out of business. This is a provision requiring the manufacturers to mark and number each gambling machine and each part, if it is disassembled. Then the makers must file with the Attorney General monthly statements of inventories and sales and deliveries.

The big problem for local law enforcement officers in getting at the slots racket has been the hidden ownership of the machines. The new law is designed to put this on record for all to see.

The bill also has a provision prohibiting the machines on ships plying between American ports, such as San Francisco and Honolulu.

When the Government wants to crack down to enforce the new law, it would be able to seize the machines and destroy them.

During the House debate, Baring said the matter was one of states' rights but Representative Dwight L. Rogers (D., Fla.), who was in charge of the bill, denied that. Tackett, too, said members were inconsistent in calling for states' rights and then voting for the bill.

"But," he added, "I'm going to vote against sin just like the rest of you. I'm just as weak as you are."

Representative Norris Poulson (R., Calif.) observed that it was only two months until election day.

When Sutton argued for keeping the one-armed bandits on Army posts, Preston said that amounted to helping a soldier "throw his money away when he gets half tanked on beer at the PX and ought to be sending it to his family as an allotment."

Representative Andrew Jacobs (D., Ind.) said one of his constituents, Samuel P. Harris, a lobbyist here for the Twenty Per Cent Cabaret Tax Committee," has "a battery of slot machines in his basement" at 4407 16th st. nw. with a sign over them saying "For Charity."

Brewster Wire Tapping Victim in 1947, Shimon Tells Senate Probers

and the boxes are easily accessible.

Shimon said the wire tapping was reserved for more important cases, one or two a year.

Darby asked Pepper to have Shimon tell the committee whether he had absolute knowledge that the head of the police force knew of the wire tapping in the '30's.

"I am pretty sure he knew, because he had a special squad assigned to him and the special squad was then composed of Truscott and Hartman."

He added, however, that no orders had even been given by the Police Chief or any other officers in connection with wire tapping.

After going to the DA's office, Shimon said his first tapping was done in 1943, or '44, to help the New York DA's office find a fugitive here.

"The next instance was a request from Miami on a fugitive. I think it was a sugar swindle of some kind . . . The request came from (Edward) Mellhen . . . chief or assistant chief of detectives in Miami."

Shimon also told of being called to the office of the late Police Chief Kelly. He said he got the call about the time he borrowed a man from No. 4 to get wire to help New York officers look for a fugitive.

Kelly called Shimon and said he understood Shimon had borowed the man, and Shimon's story went one "I said that was so and he (Major Kelly) said 'Well, what kind of work did he do?' and I said 'He tapped a wire' and he said 'Well, now wait a minute, I don't want you tapping the wires of any gambler or whorehouse of this town, do you understand?' I said it wasn't and he said 'Well, I heard it was.' I said 'Well you heard wrong' and I corrected him.

Don't Want Any Scandal

"He said, 'Well, that's all right, I just don't want anybody snooping around. The last time a policeman tapped gamblers' wires, five policemen got into trouble. I don't want any scandal,' he said. 'That's all right, that's your own business, but somebody told me it was a gambler's wire or some house of prostitution, and I don't want any of that.'"

Shimon said he told Kelly he "would not tap a wire of any gambler or any house of prostitution." ". . . He never told me not to continue with my other work."

Lieut. Shimon next told of a wiretapping job at 2510 Q st. nw., in 1946. He said he had Det. Sergt George H. Robison on the job. It was Robison's first, and when Robison saw a telephone truck pull up, he called Shimon and Shimon told him to go home. Shimon explained the tap was then worthless "because the telephone men probably called the subscriber and said 'you are having trouble on your wire.' . . . So I returned later and took the tap off. . . .

Shimon denied tapping the phone of the late Senator Bailey. The charge, he said, "is not so. I was not in any area or had any complaint or any occassion to tap complaint or any occasion to tap

Chief Barrett, in the closed sessions, denied having any knowledge of Shimon's assignments to the Hill, other than to help Representative W. Kingsland Macy (R., N. Y.) when Macy headed the 1948 House investigation of gray market activities. He said he did not order or know of Shimon's assignment to help Brewster, or of the work Shimon did that won him a commendation from Senator Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) in 1947 when Bridges headed the Senate Appropriations Committee. Bridges has told reporters he advised Brewster to call for police help to investigate the man trailing Brewster.

Major Barrett testified Macy asked for Shimon as the only one who could "do the job" but what the job was Barrett said he did not ask.

Barrett firmly denied his department permits wire tapping, or has equipment for it. "We just don't allow wire tapping," he said.

Shimon gave this account of his work for Macy:

"I talked to Congressman Macy. He explained he was heading a committee to investigate the gray market in steel, and he had received certain information there was a man in the city by the name of Col. Harry Cooper and some of his associates.

"At that particular time, I do not believe he named the associates, (Macy said) that these men had let it be known or were supposed to have someone on the commitee that they could control in the event that anybody was in trouble in the gray market."

"I gathered it was a fix with one of the investigators or somebody connected with that committee. He said it was a disturbing thing.

"He was sure everybody on his committee was honest, and he wanted me to look into Harry Cooper and just to find out if such things were going on. In that connection I looked over Harry Cooper's office, two doors from the Gralyn Hotel. He was a front man for Capt. Monroe, Monroe Kaplan. They called themselves Advice, Inc. He said it was the Monroe who became famous in Washington in the early 40's as proprietor of the Big Red House on R st.

"Harry Cooper was a former Secret Service Agent," Shimon said. "He went in OSS during the war. I worked on an asignment or two with him. I had to be very careful with Harry.

Yesterday, Shimon, dressed in his white-shirt summer police uniform and accompanied by Attorney Robert E. Lynch, clashed sharply with Senators seeking to crumple portions of his testimony with the statements of other witnesses.

Shimon's sharpest clash occurred when Senate District Chairman Matthew M. Neely (D., W. Va.) a member of the Pepper group, called upon van Arkel to witness. Nolan, once convicted of bribery and later, pardoned by the President, first reported Shimon's wire tapping after having been Shimon's auto business partner and "best friend."

Nolan's assertions that Shimon had told of tapping the phones of late Senator Josiah W. Bailey (D., N. C.) were read to the lieutenant. "I deny it," said Shimon. "I deny it." Then as Neely took up the questioning, Shimon in rising tones denied he ever tapped a wire while Nolan was around, or told Nolan of wire tapping.

Shimon took the stand after the committee heard Det. Sergt. Cook tell of working with the lieutenant in the Gralyn Hotel tapping of Advice, Inc., Cook, Herlihy and Shimon were later commended by Macy. But Macy has denied any knowledge that wire tapping was used for his committee.

He denied having told Det. Sergt. George H. Robinson, jr., that the tapping in the 2500 block of Q st. nw., was at the request of 'somebody' on the Hill.

Congress Sends $36 Billions Bill to Truman earlier victory in conference rejection of the Senate's Byrd-Bridges horizontal 10 percent cut in nondefense items.

Reports that the President might impound the $62,500,000 loan to Spain rather than veto the debate bill figured in yesterday's Senate.

Senator A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.) made a spech defending the loan but read the Senate a published story that Mr. Truman might hold up the money. Robertson said he did not challenge the President's right to do that but said "it will be his responsibility and not ours" if he impounds the loan.

Senator Pat McCarran (D., Nev.), original proponent of the loan to Spain, insisted, however, that the President could not legally impound the grant.

McCarran said he agreed the President could impound any appropriation but noted that loan is not an appropriation. He said it is in the form of a directive to the ECA Administrator instead.

"So there is nothing for the President to impound," the Nevadan argued.

Victory in Korea is everybody's job! It calls for brave men, plenty of arms and supplies in the field . . . and a successful fight against inflation by every one of us at home.

Keeping America Strong is Everybody's Job

With men dying in battle, it's time to get tough with ourselves!
We must pay for the defense of freedom . . . and we must stay strong at home as well.

This two-front job makes it more important now than ever to protect the dollar's buying power . . . to fight the force of inflation, the enemy's Sixth Column . . . and to make sure our soldiers get everything they need!

To do it calls for tough minds, tough decisions, and tight belts

1. We're up against the fact that piling arms production on top of civilian production calls for billions of added dollars. For this we need a sound economy, and we can't have a sound economy without a strong dollar.

2. We must decide to do away with things that are luxuries in the light of today's needs—The luxury of taking it easy . . . of spending freely . . . of letting Government do for us what we can do for ourselves or do without . . . of living with the Government Budget far out of balance.

3. Beyond this, we must recognize that saving is more important than ever. Greater saving is vital in many ways: It makes funds available for new tools and factories . . . for the increased production America must have. It takes "extra money" out of circulation, keeps inflation from weakening the nation's buying power, protects the value of your present personal savings.

Let's always remember: There are two essentials to winning a war. One is victory in the field. The other is making sure our economy is not being bled to death.

Pepco's Gross Rises in July, But Net Drops

By S. Oliver Goodman

Net income of Potomac Electric Power Co. totaled $425,439 in July, a drop of $21,953 or 4.91 percent under the same 1949 month.

Operating revenues of $3,224,147 were up 3.49 percent, while operating costs (including taxes) totaled $2,608,209 for a gain of 3.3 percent.

The declining earnings trend has resulted in an application for higher rates, now being weighed by the Public Utilities Commission.

For the first seven months, Pepco reported net income of $2,710,064. This was a decline of $119,056 or 4.21 percent as compared with the corresponding period last year.

Operating revenues of $21,790,705 were up 5.11 percent, while operating costs of $17,624,184 were up 4.4 percent.

PROFITS: The second quarter of 1950 was the most profitable period on record for industrial corporations, according to Standard & Poor's Corp. The increase of 2.5 percent shown for the initial three months of 1950 was swelled to a gain of 21.3 percent for the first half, based on the returns of 835 companies reporting to date. The unusually sharp rise in corporate profits, particularly in the second quarter, was attributed mainly to the following factors: (1) the high and rising rate of production and sales; (2) the stable or rising trend of commodity prices, and (3) the benefits accruing from the operation of modernized plants.

STORE SALES: The 10 percent sales gain of Washington stores in July was mild in comparison with the upsurges scored in some cities in this region. The Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond yesterday noted these sales gains for the month anad the first seven months, compared with similar 1949 periods:

Duquesne Light Co. of Pittsburgh awarded 12 million dollars of first mortgage bonds to a group headed by Drexel & Co. on a bid of 102.034 for a 2¾ percent coupon.

COMMENT: Laidlaw & Co. in a current market letter on "Common Stocks for Long Term Commitments" comments: "Utility shares . . . have been sold heavily on the basis that they would be casualties of taxation. Yet, Federal Court decisions of recent years have recognized normal tax and surtax as elements of cost in arriving at a fair rate of return allowed utility companies on invested capital. To some extent, therefore, utilities have more protection against the eroding effects of taxes than many other industries—and certainly utility shares do not carry the speculative risks typical of the average railroad common stock."

QUALIFIED: Eleven Washington insurance men have passed all tests of the American College of Life Underwriters, leading to the designation of Chartered Life Underwriter. Joseph M. Silverman, president of the D. C. Chartered Life Underwriters, said the qualified men are: Lloyd A. Brewer, jr.; Mitchell T. Curtis, Wilson P. Graham, Douglas D. Hall, Robert S. Kieffer, Kenneth G. Clarke, William M. Goldensweig, Gene P Honchok, Kenneth F. Hanst, jr., William L. Porte and Roy H. Woodside.

RAIL UPSURGE: Three more railroads operating in the Washington area yesterday reported sharp upturns in July net income. Baltimore & Ohio netted $1,162,953 last month, a gain of $1,106,946 over the same 1949 period. Seven-month net, however, totaled $6,486,957 against $6,902,364 a year ago. The two others:

Yanks, Tigers Lose; Tribe Blows 11-Run Lead

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

ON FRIDAY EVENING of next week Mr. Willie Papaleo will clamber through the ropes of the ring in Yankee Stadium and battle to keep his world featherweight title from the clutches of Sandy Saddler. Papaleo, hereinafter to be known as Pep, will be meeting the man deemed most likely to end his eight-year reign of his division.

The last time Pep climbed out of the ring after a fight with Saddler, a year ago, he was still the champion but quite unrecognizeable as Willie Pep. His face was knocked into odd shapes, one eye was ballooning by the minute, he had the lips of a Ubangi and he looked unlike the champion of anybody.

Povich

But he had licked Saddler. At least the referee and judges said he did, and there wasn't much quarrel with that decision by anybody except Saddler and his handlers. They thought they had won the fight, and took some roundhouse verbal belts at Referee Eddie Joseph for actions unbecoming a referee.

Specifically, the Saddler people squawked that Joseph gave the fading and punched-up Pep too much of a break in the clinches, grabbing Saddler's left arm and immobilizing that weapon until Pep could get properly squared away again.

BUT AS THE IMPARTIAL ringsiders saw it, Pep had clearly taken his title out of the ring with him. He wasn't much to look at at the finish, true enough, but he was a real champion in the blue-chip stages of the brawl. He was tuckered, he was being outpunched, and he was having a time of it keeping away from Saddler's numbing left hook. And he was fighting with only one good eye.

That's when Pep called on all his skill. He jabbed and ran. He discomboberated Saddler by carrying the fight to him, keeping the Bostonian off balance and preserving the point-lead he had amassed earlier. He gave Saddler a boxing lesson in the corners. He wasn't there when Saddler was cocking his left hook. When Pep did return to the attack, a bewildered Saddler backed off in despair from the fellow he thought was on the verge of a knockout.

The memory of that swatfest and Champion Pep's remarkable ability to haul his title out of the late-round mess is enough to ignite hopes of a new record gate for the featherweight decision when they meet on September 8. The first $200,000 gate in history is now foreseen, with television getting the heave-ho, with Pep taking down 45 percent for his end.

BECAUSE THE 28-YEAR-OLD Pep is a year older, and sometimes acts weary about the whole business of staying in the fight business, and because Saddler could knock him out with one punch, it's the challenger who is the favorite for their battle next week. In New York this week, it's 7-to-5, Saddler. The younger man with the left hook is looking like the more solid risk.

In any event, the featherweight division is bouncing back to a popularity it never knew during Pep's eight-year reign. And before that, feather champions had been putting their title on the line cheaply. Even Henry Armstrong, when he was featherweight champ, rarely fought for a $100,000 gate, and gave up the title of that division to concentrate on the lightweights, so meager were the earnings. There was little demand for feathers in the big towns, and they were reduced to nontitle fights in the sticks.

Kid Chocolate, the fancy Cuban, and Al Singer drew the biggest featherweight gate, back in 1929, and curiously enough neither one was a champion at that time. Chocolate was the biggest drawing card in the division, however, and Singer was a huge local favorite in New York, which accounted for most of the gate. Pep has been one of the great champions, but until Saddler came along there was no serious challenger, and the division lapsed into high disinterest.

SADDLER HAS COME a long way since Promoter Joe Turner brought him in to Washington a few years ago to fight some nonentity at Griffith Stadium in a six-round preliminary to the Al Hart-Tony Shucco show. Boxing underneath that pair stamped Saddler as of little importance, but the late Jimmy Johnson, his manager, was proclaiming even then that "I've got the next featherweight champion."

Always looking for a new gimmick, Johnson originally tabbed Saddler as "the fighting Scotchman," and decked him out in plaids and kilts to give the claim some authenticity. It got some attention because Scotch Negroes are rare, if at all, but Johnson stoutly maintained that his boy was from Edinburgh, although the burr was strangely missing, and there were already hints that he actually came from Boston town.

The most surprised individual, however, was Detroit's promoter, Scotty Monteith, who in good faith booked Saddler for a Detroit show, and rallied a Scots society to pay him homage when the fighter showed up in Detroit. When Monteith finally received some publicity photos of Saddler in ring togs from Johnson, however, he called the reception off with the explanation that there must have been some mistake.

Home-Grown Baugh Big Show As Redskins Take on Detroit

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 28.—Texas will be divided into three parts come Wednesday night and the Cotton Bowl Stadium clash between the unbeaten Washington Redskins and Detroit Lions.

On one side, there'll be the Texas Christian University partisans from nearby Forth Worth. They'll be a-rootin' and a-shouting' for old grads Sammy Baugh and Pete Stout, of the Redskins.

On the other side, there'll be the Southern Methodist University crowd from right here in Dallas. They'll lead a vocal stampede for former Mustang stars Doak Walker and Gil Johnson, now with the Lions.

Between the two factions, and compromising the minority of the expected gathering of 45,000, will be middle-of-the-road Lone Star Staters, just out to see a professional football exhibition.

The "neutrals" won't lack for something in the way of state pride to cheer for, however.

There's Texas "Bo" McMillin, head coach of the Lions. Bo played high school football at Fort Worth, 28 miles from here, before going to Centre College and beating Harvard 30 years ago to establish a name for himself.

And there's Quarterback Bobby Layne, of Texas University several seasons ago, and All-America Center Joe Watson, of Rice.

In addition to Baugh and Stout, the Redskins offer for Texas approval as professionals Fullback Rob Goode, of Texas A&M, and fullback Hardy Brown, a Fort Worth boy who took the wrong road and wound up at Tulsa University.

Regardless of the hero worship for Doak Walker in this pro-Walker town, 36-year-old Baugh will still be the big show. Slingin'

Averts Injury

Navy Star Blocks Auto

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 28 (AP).—Navy Halfback Vic Vine stiff-armed an automobile today and saved himself from being run over.

Vine came running out to the field with the other varsity players this afternoon to pose for photographers on this, the first day of practice.

Wearing his cumbersome helmet, he didn't see the car rushing toward him until an accident was almost certain. Then the guy who last year used a tough straight arm to good advantage in carrying the ball, smacked the car automatically.

The car's ventilator window broke into splinters, but the shock pushed Vine away from the certain injury that everyone expected.

Vine bandaged up his hurt wrist and joined in the practice

Jim Pearce Tosses Nats To 9-3 Win Over Browns

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Rookie Jim Pearce, with a five-week rest as a starting pitcher, tasted the novel experience of going the route in the big leagues last night. He didn't beat much, the eight-place Browns, but he beat 'em convincingly, 9-3, on behalf of the Nats.

As late as two out in the ninth, Pearce was on the brink of a shutout triumph, but at that point they whacked him for all of their three runs.

Otherwise the Browns performed exactly as an eighth-place ball club. They tossed four errors into the proceedings, twice threw the ball to bases unoccupied by their infielders, and showed the Nats a pair of 14-hit pitchers.

Manager Zach Taylor was spared the sight of most of the horrible scenes. He was mercifully thumbed out of the game by Umpire Charley Berry during the Nats, four-run fifth inning for expostulating too loudly that Catcher Les Moss did so have his foot on the plate when the Browns tried for a force play at home.

Fan Gets Into Act

At that point, one of the 4899 fans also got into the act—a shirt-sleeved character who leaped the box seats and wanted to discuss the play with Berry. The gendarmes thumbed him to the 8th Precinct.

Pearce was some shucks before he lost his shut-out in the ninth. To that point the big right hander, a six-and-a-half footer, was pitching four-hit ball, had walked nobody, or even gone as far as a three-ball count on any hitter. Nobody got as far as third base until the ninth.

But the Browns packed five hits into that final inning. With men on first and second, and two out, Pearce seemingly had his shut-out on a short fly by Ken Wood into right field. But Johnny Ostrowski couldn't get to the ball and it dropped at his feet for a double. Two more hits produced two more runs before Pearce got rid of Pinch-hitter Lollar.

Browns Help Freely

With the Browns' help, the Nats built up Pearce's big 910 lead. Grasso's fly ball knocked in a run off Rookie Jack Bruner in the second, and in the third Mele's double and Ostrowski's single produced another.

In the fifth the Nats achieved four runs on two hits. Bruner filled the bases on a pair of walks and Ostrowski's safe bunt. On Coan's grounder to Stirnweiss, the throw to the plate beat Norean, but Umpire Berry said Catcher Moss didn't have his foot on the platter, and allowed the run. That's when Taylor allowed Berry was a such-and-such, and got the bum's rush.

A bit later, Grasso singled to center, and the game blew wide open. Bruner intercepted Delsing's throw to the plate, conceding two runs, and threw to first to try to trap Grasso rounding that bag. Unfortunately, nobody was covering first, another run scored and Grasso wound up on third base.

Acting Manager Ralph Winegarner decided Bruner was no asset and replaced him with Harry Dorish.

Grasso's double to the right field corner produced the Nats' seventh run in the seventh, and in the eighth they got two more. That rally was featured by another eighth-place play by the Browns. Noren, who singled to right, was trapped rounding first and in the run-down Shortstop Somers let him get away and a run score by throwing the ball to some unidentified benchwarmer in the Washington dugout.

IN SHORT . . . Another one of those things — day and night games—are scheduled with the Tigers for 2:30 and 8:30 p. m. of this date . . . it will be Dizzy Trout (11-3) against Sandy Consuegra (5-5) in the afternoon game. Sid Hudson will pitch the night game against Hank Borowy, ex-Pirate now with the Tigers . . . Gil Coan extended his hitting streak to 14 games last night on his first try. He rapped a hard smash to Lenhardt and beat it out. Coan's speed paid off again later in the inning when he scored from third on Grasso's short fly to right despite Wood's perfect throw . . . The Nats' front office is getting downright magnanimous to the ladies. Wednesday afternoon will be the third special Ladies Day in a week. The Tigers are here.

THAT KIND OF DAY—No doubt, Charlie Sieber would rather have hung his clothes on a hickory limb and gone for a swim in yesterday's humid heat. Instead, this 19-year-old Naval Academy player got into football togs for the Middies' first workout of the new season. Sieber comes from Amarillo, Tex., stands 6 feet, 3 inches, weighs 195 pounds, plays center, is one of the newcomers to the varsity that new head coach Eddie Erdelatz hopes will give Navy a new grip on things

Erdelatz Says First Game Will Tell Story About Navy

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 28 (AP).—"Wait until the first game and you can idge yourself."

Thus did Eddie Erdelatz brush off today queries on how the Navy ootball team would look in his first season as coach.

The new coach, taking on one of college football's toughest assignents, started by informing questioners that any weekness should e readily apparent to them in the first game.

The opening game September 30 is against Maryland, a neighbor aded with talent.

"After that game we can sit down and talk about what we are lacking," said Eddie at the opening Navy practice in midsummer heat.

Until then, Erdelatz said the makeup of his first-string eleven is still in the air. Erdelatz came to the Navy from the San Francisco 49ers to succeed George Sauer.

"We started out in spring practice being fair and square and showed no preference on last year's performance."

Still he admitted that last year's starting backfield of Bob Zastrow, Dave Bannerman, Bill Powers and Frankie Hauff would start if the Middies had to play tomorrow.

In the same breath he added there might be a few changes in a month. Close observers predicted a couple of Plebes would break into the starting lineup by first game time.

Erdelatz, in his first job as head coach, began by stating "we have no complaints about the Navy squad."

He reported, "We are worrying about each game as it comes up—the opening game with Maryland first."

The Navy varsity squad today posed for photographs for newsmen from all over the area. Tomorrow, the first day of practice, will launch a two-week period of two training sessions per day

Al Zarilla's Homer Wins; Lemon Sours

Boston, Aug. 25 (AP).—For the second time in as many days Boston's suddenly spirited Red Sox refused to roll over and play dead for Cleveland as they overcame a 12-1 Indian lead for a stormy 15-14 victory today before 28,328 paid fans.

The Boston triumph further tightened the American League pennant race.

The Sox pulled themselves within three games of the leading Detroit Tigers who were whipped 4-3 in Philadelphia.

The Tigers have a one game edge over the New York Yankees, also beaten today, and a two game margin over the Indians.

What proved the winning margin was Al Zarilla's seventh homer of the season, socked well into the seats in right field.

Lemon Appeared In

Bob Lemon appeared headed for his twenty-first victory with little trouble after the Indians tied together seven walks, a pair of hits and a hit batsman by Lefty Maurice McDermott for five runs in the first two innings. They added five more runs off Jim McDonald before Dick Littlefield got the side out in the third.

Littlefield gave up another pair in the fourth when the Sox, who had managed to score once in the third, suddenly came to life and drove Lemon out of the game.

The Sox scored eight times in that fourth as they blasted Lemon for six singles and collected two bases on balls for five of their runs.

Al Benton, who followed Lemon, gave up a three-run double to Billy Goodman before he could still the suddenly aroused Boston bats.

Benton lasted until the sixth when the Sox scored two more and Bob Feller, the losing pitcher, came in to strike out Vollmer, Dropo and Doerr after men were on second and third with none out.

In the eighth, Feller was driven to the dugout in favor of Steve Gromek after Johnny Pesky's single, Goodman's second double and a 420 foot triple by Walt Dropo tied the score 13-13.

Bob Doerr's long fly scored Dropo and Zarilla followed with his homer.

Rookie Willard Nixon, blasted from the box only yesterday by these same Indians, took over the Boston pitching assignment at the start of the fifth.

He was found for an unearned

Scarborough

Scarborough, Zernial Jolt Champs, 6-4

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—Ray Scarborough, righthanded ace of the Chicago White Sox, kept the New York Yankees from a virtual tie in the American League race today by stopping the World Champions, 6 to 4, on six hits.

With Detroit's loss to Philadelphia already posted on the scoreboard, the New Yorkers had a chance to move within two percentage points of the league-leading Tigers.

But because the 32-year-old Scarborough had one of his better days the New Yorkers still trail the Tigers by one game.

Big Gus Zernial helped Scarborough pick up his twelfth triumph with a two-run homer in the fifth inning, off reliever Joe Ostrowski. It was Zernial's twenty-first home run of the season.

The only Yankees able to solve Scarborough were Joe DiMaggio and Tommy Henrich, the two "old pros." DiMaggio, who had a single and triple, drove across two runs. Henrich hit two singles.

The Chisox scored in the first inning on a walk, Floyd Baker's single and a fly ball. The Yankees immediately tied it in their half on Gene Woodling's walk, a ground out and DiMaggio's line drive single to center.

Chicago went ahead with three runs in the fourth inning, Scarborough accounting for one with a single. Losing Pitcher Fred Sanford filled the bases with three walks after one was out. Chico Carrasquel hit into a force play and Eddie Robinson scored from third.

After Scarborough delivered run No. 3 with his hit, Carrasquel scored from third when Catcher Larry Berra threw high to second

Newhouser Loses, 4-3, To Lowly A's

Philadelphia, Aug. 28 (AP).—The pennant aspirations of the Detroit Tigers, now leading the American League by one game, received another jolt today as they dropped a 4-3 decision to the frequently kicked around Philadelphia Athletics.

It was the A's second triumph in two days over the Tigers and the victim was Hal Newhouser, prince of the Detroit mound corps.

Little Bobby Shantz, who recorded his seventh win, held the Tigers scoreless until the eighth. Bob Swift then homered with the bases empty. Two singles and a balk resulted in a second run.

In the ninth, Johnny Groth pounded another Shantz pitch over the wall but it was too late to do any good.

The A's, beaten twice before by Newhouser, scored twice in the second.

The winning margin came in the sixth. Barney McCosky singled, Ferris Fain walked and Sam Champion doubled off the left field wall. The blast was inches shy of being a home run.

The victory gave the A's the series, two victories to one (the teams split a twin bill yesterday). It was one of the few times this season that Connie Mack's team won a series.

Corriden Finds Crutches Lucky

New York, Aug. 28 (AP).—John (Red) Corriden, manager of the Chicago White Sox, was on crutches today as he directed his team to its 6-4 victory over the New York Yankees.

The 62-year-old pilot was hit on the right ankle by a line drive fro mthe bat of Catcher Phil Masi during Sunday's game. X-rays showed no break, but the Sox manager will have to use crutches to get around for the next few days.

He is training at the Northeast Gym, and yesterday went three rounds with little Gene Smith, who also will fight on the same card. His opponent has not been named.

Hoyas Look Fit, Rugged in First Workout

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Fifty-odd tanned and trim bruisers began football practice yesterday at Georgetown University. At the rate the August sun was pouring down, they'll be a lot more trim by the time they open a rugged nine-game slate at Penn State September 30.

Best indication of how fit the squad looked is the fact that roly-poly Tackle Art Sheridan reported weighing only 218. Last summer, the Rhode Island lad showed up at 242. Sheridan confessed that the coaches prepared a special diet for him this year. Asked if he thought he was any faster, Sheridan said he didn't know, he hadn't tried running. Maybe he's too weak.

Youthful Coach Bob Margarita hastened to report that the squad wasn't as good as it looked.

Faster But Inexperienced

"I think we'll be faster than we were last year," he said, "but we're terribly inexperienced. And I'm afraid that's going to hurt against the type of teams we have to go up against."

Margarita isn't kidding. Captain Tom Hardiman, Quarterback Frank Mattingly, Halfback Dick Barba and Fullbacks Dick Haesler and Don Kitkowski are the only lettermen he has in the backfield. Haesler is principally a place-kicking specialist.

Sophomores are going to have to make the backfield go. There are some special ones like McKinley Tech's Bob (Bugs) Thompson, transfer from Clemson, who figures to take Billy Conn's left half spot. Other potentially good second-year men include Fullbacks Gino Pagluica and Len Makofske, Halfbacks Dick Doyle, Jack O'Mahoney, Clem Rieger and Ralph Charney.

One Deep At Quarter

The Hoyas are just about one deep at quarterback, the vital spot in the T-formation. Behind Mattingly is Hardiman, principally a defensive ace who excels at pass interceptions, and Soph Chuck Gagliano. Bob Deacon, second-stringer last season who threw two touchdowns in the last three minutes of the Sun Bowl, flunked out with Conn. So did Warren McFague, best defensive halfback on the squad.

The line appears to have an ample number of holdovers from end to end. Biggest change is the shift of Bob Noppinger, brilliant end drafted by mistake last winter by the Redskins, to tackle. At 234 pounds, Noppinger looks like a whale of a tackle.

Georgetown goes on a two-practice a day routine today.

Is Boudreau Discouraged? The Guy's Talking Pennant!

Boston, Aug. 28 (AP).—His Cleveland Indians blew a 7-0 lead on Sunday and a 12-1 lead today in losing twice to the Boston Red Sox but Manager Lou Boudreau still insisted today that his Indians would win the pennant.

The prediction broke a month of silence by Boudreau on the Tribe's chances. Only last week he refused to comment, declaring that he was "saying nothing—only hoping."

But today Boudreau, perhaps attempting to boost morale after the club's two-day blow-up, said:

"I've been pessimistic all season, but now I feel confident. We're going to win. The only thing our losses to the Red Sox did is to keep them in the race a little longer. We'll lose our share but at the end of the season we'll be on top."

Boudreau, a self-described "pessimist all season," listed three main reasons for being so sure: 1. The players: "In all my years as manager we've never had such a fine group." 2. Individual performance: "Our pitching is excellent and I see signs of our hitting returning." 3. The opposition: "None of the other leaders seems to have an abundance of hitting."

[(Editor's note: Boston smacked 11 hits in winning Sunday and clouted 15 today.)]

Whiz Kids Increase Lead to 5½

Chicago, Aug. 28 (AP).—Three successive home runs by Hank Sauer supplied the momentum for a 7 to 5 Chicago Cubs' victory over the Philadelphia Phillies today before the Phils increased their first place lead over the Brooklyn Dodgers to five and one-half games by winning the second game, 9 to 5.

In addition to Sauer's three homers, there were five others in the doubleheader. Andy Pafko, Bill Serena, Twig Terwilliger, Andy Seminick and Del Ennis each hit one.

Sauer's three homers gave him a total of seven for five days' work and his season total 26.

The Cubs tied the score in the second game and that brought out Jim Konstanty, the great relief pitcher. He stopped them cold in his fifty-seventh appearance of the season to win his twelfth victory.

The Phils won the game in the seventh with two runs on singles by Eddie Waitkus and Ennis, a wide throw to second by Johnny Klippstein, a fielder's choice and a long fly by Hammer.

President's Cup Regatta Has Caught on Nationally

By Happy Walker

Evidence that the President's Cup regatta association's month-long aquatic sports epic creates national interest is contained in a letter received by this writer from Nathan L. Mallison, superintendent of recreation, Jacksonville, Fla.

It appears that Mallison, whose inquiry reads in part, "Will you be so kind as to supply me with information concerning the events, especially the sailing," competed in the President's Cup sailing regatta in 1937.

Walker

Further evidence of widespread interest is the many inquiries and requests for reservations at recent power and sail regattas throughout the circuit.

The curtain-raiser for the show is the canoe regatta which takes place next Sunday, September 3, on the Georgetown Channel between Highway and Memorial bridges. Fifteen events are slated starting at 1 p. m.

Co-Chairmen W. D. Havens and W. A. Rogers are enthusiastic at the news that some 60 crack Canadian paddlers will be on hand to add an international flavor to the meet.

Teams from the Somerset canoe club, Somerset, Mass., Yonkers, Inwood and Pendleton Canoe Clubs from New York City, the Sebago and Philadelphia Canoe Clubs are already entered with Washington Canoe Club, Dempsey's Canoe Club and Potomac Boat Club carrying the local colors.

Ample spectator reviewing vantage points are available at no charge and the Arcade Pontic Co. is sponsoring the public address service which will describe the events of the day.

The success of the amateur sailing races held each Saturday and Sunday by the Washington sailing marina is also marked that the schedule has been extended through September 16 and 17.

Chairman Walter Collier and his race committee are highly gratified at this year's turn of events with 20 to 25 novice skippers on hand every weekend on the Lower Potomac.

Firemen Lead, 10-1, End 10-10

A 10-1 lead was blown by the Fire Department and yesterday's opening game of the City championship tournament with the Heurich Brewers ended in a 10-10 tie.

The same two teams will meet on the Ellipse at 5:30 o'clock this afternoon.

At the end of three innings, the Firemen thought they had the game well in hand with a 10-1 advantage. A five-run rally pulled the Brewers up to a 9-19 deficit in the seventh.

Red Giegerich walked and raced home with the tying run on Bernie Good's hit-and-run single when George O'Brien, second baseman for the Firemen, missed the throw-in from the outfield in the eighth and last inning.

Tie-Up With Theaters

Football Game May Return Million in New Video Plan

Ann Arbor, Mich., Aug. 28 (AP).—Possibility of a one-million-dollar gate to two-million-dollar gate for a single college football game loomed with the disclosure that the Western Conference may televise some of its 1951 games in 400 theaters across the Nation.

Athletic Director H. O. (Fritz) Crisler declared that the conference, which will experiment with theater television on a limited basis this fall, is considering broadening the program next year. Working with the conference is United Paramount Theaters, Inc.

Some of Michigan's games would probably be used in such a program. Michigan now has the largest stadium under college control, seating nearly 100,000, and is one of the top ranking football powers.

Under special arrangements, the Michigan games this fall will be shown at the Michigan Theater in downtown Detroit. Illinois games will be screened at a couple of big theaters in Chicago.

That will be the only live television of Big Ten games this year, although Michigan will continue its practice of permitting films of its Saturday games to be telecast on Sunday night.

Crisler pointed out that the income potential from the 400 theater chain would be tremendous. He said that for example the Michigan Theater, charging special feature prices could gross $5000 to $6000 per game this year. A local theater operator said he would guess the admission price would have to be $1.50 or more.

Crisler said the games would be televised in the Michigan Stadium, transferred to 35 millimeter film and projected on the big movie screen with a lag of only 20 seconds.

If the 1950 season is a success theater-wise and is extended to the greater number of theaters, Michigan will retain complete control of what theaters will be allowed to show the films.

McNeill Upsets Aussie McGregor

Gil Bogley Also Loses In Nationals

Forest Hills, N. Y., Aug. (AP).—The crowd at the national tennis championships had to wait until dusk to witness an upset in today's opening round of play, but when it finally came it was a beauty.

Don McNeill, now a 32-year-old weekend player living out at Bellerose, Long Island, knocked the props from under Ken McGregor, youthful prodigy of the Australian Davis Cup Team, 9—7, 3—6, 6—4, 6—1.

Sure, McGregor had been beaten in a five-setter yesterday by Tom Brown jr. in the final match of the cup challenge round. But nobody suspected that the likes of McNeill, who won the title back in '40 and hadn't even played in the tournament the past three years, could stand up to the 21-year-old Aussie whiz kid.

His ground strokes were steadied than McGregor's, and he repeatedly passed the big Aussie at the net. His volley's was sharp and conclusive. Even his lobbing was something to see as he dropped them on the baseline time after time to McGregor's discomfiture.

All of the other seeded favorites advanced successfully through the opening round.

Frank Sedgman of Australia defeated Harold Burrows, jr. of the University of Virginia, 3—6, 6—3, 7—5, 10—8.

Herbie Flam of Beverly Hills, the No. 1 American since a sprained ankle kayoed Budge Patty, was forced to rally to subdue Gilbert Bogley of Chevy Chase, Md., by 3—6, 6—4, 6—1, 6—4. Jaroslav Drobny, No. 2 foreign seed, disposed of Dr. Arnold Beisser, of Santa Anita, Calif., 3—7, 9—7, 11—9, 6—2.

Tom Brown, jr., whipped Jack Tuero of New Orleans, 1—6, 6—4, 6—1, 6—4 and Gardnar Mulloy, fro mMiami, knocked out Tony Vincent of New York City, 6—4, 6—0, 6—1.

run in the eighth, and lasted until the ninth when Ellis Kinder saved the victory for him.

Singled by Luke Easter and Al Rosen after one out prompted the Sox to replace Nixon with Kinder. A force play allowed the fourteenth Indian run to score and Kinder ended the three hours, 26 minute game by getting Pinch-hitter Joe Gordon on a called third strike.

Home-Grown Baugh Big Show As Redskins Play in Texas

Sam is something of a legend in Texas.

He's played here only twice since leaving T.C.U. to join the Redskins in 1937. His last appearance in Texas was in this same city 12 years ago in an exhibition game.

To today's high school and college football players in Texas, Baugh is a football idol. They've read of his fabulous passing records, seen him in the movies and clipped his picture out of the newspapers. But very few have seen the pride of Texas play football. Tomorrow night is one of their rare opportunities and advance ticket sales to high school and college students indicate they will take advantage of it.

Hundreds of kids swarmed the lobby of the Redskins' Hotel this morning hunting for Baugh to get his autograph. But The Slinger was not here. He was en route from his ranch at Rotan where he is bringing Mrs. Baugh and the two Baugh sons to Dallas for the game Wednesday.

IN SHORT—The Redskins may land Tackle Jerry Voegele, of the New York Yanks any day. The Yanks are reportedly interested in a couple of the rookie Washington ends . . . because they've won all three of their pre-season games while Detroit has dropped both of its, to Pittsburgh and Cleveland, the Redskins have been established early 7-point favorites . . . Howie Livingston may miss the game. He got his left-hand mashed in Saturday night's victory over the Cardinals in Denver . . . when Halfback George Thomas, of Oklahoma, saw a billboard advertising Wednesday's game which had his name listed as one of the Texas stars, he quipped: "Just like these Texans to claim everything good" . . . It's later than you think: season tickets for the January 1 Cotton Bowl game went on sale here today.

King Outdoes Pros With 69 In Pro-Am

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

TED KING, little known Washington amateur, beat the best professionals the Middle Atlantic Golf Association had to offer yesterday.

King shot a fine three-below-par 69 for the best score of the day in the Pro-Amateur tournament held at East Potomac public golf course.

His score, cut to a net 66 by a three handicap, gave him low gross and a tie for low net in the amateur sweepstakes, and half of first place in the Pro-Am.

King teamed up with Andy Gibson, Country Club of Maryland (Baltimore) pro, to shatter the two-man team record on the 6522-yard B and D courses at East Potomac. They put together a ten-below-par, best ball 62.

Bethesda's Wayne McGee tied with King for low net in the amateur sweeps, carding an 83-17—66. Gibson was low pro with a two-below-par 70.

OUTSIDE OF Gibson's half of the winning team score, the Pro-Am was practically a Washington affair. The locals swept the next nine places.

King was four below par at the end of six holes. He birdied the first with a 12-foot putt, parred two and three, deuced the 184-yard fourth, chipped to within five feet of the pin on the fifth for a birdie three, and took a birdie four on the 495-yard sixth.

More than 200 golfers from the Middle Atlantic area competed in the tournament, making it the largest of this year's series.

J. R. Hickey, Ex-Officer in U. S. Service, Found Dead

Merchant Marine Commodore, 38, Had Been Retired by Ill Health in July

Commodore John R. Hickey, 38, whose ill health a month ago forced his retirement as assistant commandant of the United States Maritime Service, was found dead in his northwest apartment yesterday.

Homicide detectives reported finding a bottle of sleeping tablets on a table next to the chair in which Hickey was sitting in his apartment at 1851 Columbia rd. nw.

Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy said he would perform an autopsy at the District Morgue today to determine the exact cause of death.

Commodore Hickey was discovered late in the afternoon by Gus Lunden, 75, apartment house elevator operator, who had been looking in on the former Merchant Marine official in accordance with a family request.

Lunden tried to open a conversation with the figure in the chair,

COMMODORE J. R. HICKEY
. . . Found dead in apartment

he said, but when he could get no answer he went for help. Police reported a burned-out cigarette was wedged in the dead man's fingers.

Admiral Telfair Knight, commandant of the Maritime Service, last night said Hickey was a "highly competent" engineer officer, who came to Washington in 1942 from New England as executive officer to the assistant commandant.

Returned to Sea

He returned to sea for a year during the war and was promoted to assistant commandant and placed in charge of training merchant seamen in 1946, Admiral Knight said.

The admiral said he didn't know from what Hickey was suffering, except that "his doctor said he ought to quit working." Hickey had been on sick leave for some time before he retired on July 31.

Joseph T. Dixon, Hickey's brother-in-law and manager of the Columbia rd. apartment house, said Hickey's wife, Mrs. Margaret Ann Hickey, and their three children have been visiting her family in Martha's Vineyard, Mass.

It's Back to School for Arlington Teachers

The Washington Post

HEAD START ON STUDENTS—Arlington public school children will be happy to learn that their teachers—500 of them—yesterday began preparing for the worst—the reopening of classes next week. Among those reporting for a series of preschool meetings and instruction were these three new teachers, who'll be at Stratford Junior High School. From left, they are Mrs. Catherine Packard, Miss Kittie Blakemore and Miss Carter Harris. New pupils will register throughout the county from next Tuesday through Thursday

Bookie Suspect Caught With Relief Checks

Vice Squad Raid Nets Numbers Slips, Coast Checks, Police Say

A bookie suspect arrested yesterday by Vice Squad detectives has been receiving relief checks from San Francisco since his arrival in Washington several months ago, police declared.

The detectives crashed into a third-floor apartment at 2225 N st. nw. at 3 p. m. and arrested Martin J. Bernstein, 45. In searching the apartment, police said they found six uncashed relief checks from San Francisco.

"I'm an unemployed shoe salesman," they quoted him as explaining. "I'm not working, so there's no reason I shouldn't be on relief."

Police gave Bernstein no "relief." They charged him with operating a lottery, possession of lottery slips, setting up a gaming table and permitting gaming.

United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence set bond of $2000 at the arraignment and continued the hearing until September 6.

Lieut. Roy Blick, head of the Vice Squad, said the raid was set up after his men received a tip that a bookmaker was taking horse and numbers bets over a certain telephone.

Blick said that for six days his men called the telephone number and were given information on race winners and the winning lottery number for the day. On the basis of this, Blick said, a search warrant was obtained from Commissioner Lawrence.

A Lorton Reformatory trusty who had only six days to serve of a sentence for manslaughter, escaped yesterday at the Municipal Market, 11th and E sts. sw.

Donald Clemmer, District Director of Corrections, said Clifton Gilliam, 51, fled about 1 p. m., after he had accompanied a truck from the District Reformatory at Lorton, Va., to the market to pick up produce.

Clemmer said Gilliam told the drver of the truck he had to go to the rest room, then slipped out of a back window. He had been a well-behaved prisoner, Clemmer reported.

Gilliam, who formerly lived at 11 Logan ct. nw., was serving a 2- to 8-year term. He fatally injured James Rhodes, 48, of 22 Logan ct. nw., with a 3-inch piece of wood during a dice game argument on August 1, 1943.

Theft Suspect Is Collared by Speedy Rookie

If AAU officials are looking for good Olympics materials they should scout Rookie Police Pvt. J. E. Finegan of the Eighth Precinct.

Finegan proved his mettle yesterday on the flat and over hurdle, collaring a housebreaking suspect after a six-block chase through alleys and over back fences.

He ripped his trousers and scraped a knee going over one fence, but he nabbed his man at Reno rd. and Warren st. nw. The suspect, Julius E. Dunn, 23, of Montclair, N. J., was charged with petty larceny and housebreaking.

Finegan and his scout car partner, J. H. Flatau, also a rookie, were sent to investigate a housebreaking at St. Ann's Rectory, 42d and Yuma sts. nw.

They raced to Tenley Circle. There was a bus, a young man aboard it. It was Dunn.

When he saw the policemen, he jumped from the bus and ran.

Just Walks In

Young Man Helps Self At Embassy

Strange things happened yesterday at the French Embassy, none of them likely to create an international situation however.

A stranger walked into the kitchen of the Embassy at 2221 Kalorama rd. nw., helped himself to a glass of water and probably 75 cents in grocery funds.

Albert Wideman, head butler at the Embassy, heard a refrigerator door slam at about 3 p. m., investigated and found a youth of about 20 sipping water in the kitchen.

The youth claimed to be the chauffeur for the Thailand Embassy, just across the street. However, Wideman knew the chauffeur for the Thailand Embassy to be an elderly man.

"How did you get in here?" asked Wideman.

"Annie let me in," said the stranger. "She told me I could get a drink up here."

The butler assumed that he referred to Annie Mongo, laundress for the French Embassy.

"Do you know Annie?"

"Yes, I do."

Wideman escorted the youth downstairs and confronted him with Annie Mongo.

"I don't know him," said the laundress. "I've never seen him before."

"Are you sure you don't know me?" the stranger asked her.

"I'm sure," said Annie.

"Well," said the stranger, "I apologize. I'm very, very sorry."

With that he walked out the back door of the embassy and disappeared.

The butler returned to the kitchen and found only 17 cents where 92 cents in grocery funds had been before.

The problem confronting diplomatic minds last night was this: why would a thief take 75 cents and leave 17 cents behind?

North Capitol Street Addition Questioned

Would Hinder Planning For Carroll Stadium, Archdiocese Declares

Extension of North Capitol street through Soldiers' Home Park would force relocation of the stadium for the new Catholic Carroll High School, the District Commissioners were told yesterday.

Representatives of the Catholic Archdiocese of Washington, while not opposing the street extension, asked for protection against financial loss if the project is approved. The proposed roadway would run from Michigan ave. north through Soldiers Home Park to Claremont dr.

W. B. Jones, attorney for the archdiocese, pointed out at the Commissioners' hearing that the street would cut through land already graded for the stadium.

The Carroll School is under construction on property which adjoins the National Cemetery at Soldiers Home in the vicinity of Fort dr. and Half pl. ne. The school is expected to be ready for occupancy by September, 1951.

Jones said the stadium site has been leveled and graded at a cost of $28,000. He said the archdiocese owns sufficient property to build the stadium elsewhere but that land would have to be filled and a retaining wall constructed. He estimated the cost might run as high as $200,000.

Jones urged quick decision on extending the street since the archdiocese wants the stadium completed by time the school is opened. He pointed out that if the District condemned land for the street and then abandoned the project the archdiocese would have to pay the bill for moving the stadium.

Irving Bryan, assistant corporation counsel, said the Commissioners lacked authority to make an agreement with the archdiocese. The question of payment would have to be determined by condemnation since that is the only way the District legally can acquire land for streets, he said.

Representative John W. McCormack (D., Mass.), House majority leader, also spoke at the hearing for the archdiocese.

Acalotti Is Refused Parole; May Be Assigned to Atlanta

The parole application of Attilio Acalotti, Thomas circle "tough guy," has been refused and he will probably be sent to the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta, it was announced yesterday.

Acalotti

Last December Acalotti was sentenced to serve from eight months to two years for threatening a Government witness.

The witness was Acalotti's former girl friend, Bernice Franklin, 31-year-old waitress. Acalotti threatened to "bash in" her face after she testified before a special grand jury investigating gambling involving Acalotti and others.

Acalotti had appealed the conviction in this case as well as a subsequent gambling conviction but withdrew the appeal in July because he was becoming eligible for parole and could not be considered for parole if the appeals were still pending.

When Acalotti appeared in District Court last December to be sentenced for threatening Miss Franklin, Judge Alexander Holtzoff said he felt it "desirable to separate the defendant from any connection with his associates and to make it difficult for them to communicate with him."

At that time, Judge Holtzoff said he would "recommend to the Attorney General that he be commited not to Lorton (the District Reformatory at Lorton, Va.) but to a Federal penitentiary a considerable distance from Washington."

Accordingly, the Federal Bureau of Prisons ticketed Acalotti for Atlanta on January 9. However, according to the District Department of Corrections, the transfer was held up until Acalotti's appeals had been decided and he remained in the District Jail.

When he finally withdrew the appeals last July 24, he was only a month away from being eligible for parole, so he continued to remain here.

The District Department of Corrections said it is likely now that the transfer to Atlanta will be carried out.

In announcing denial of parole to Acalotti yesterday, the District Parole Board said Acalotti's release had been refused because it "would not be in the public interest."

If he is transferred to Atlanta, Acalotti would pass from the jurisdiction of the District Parole Board and would come under the control of the United States Board of Parole.

Any future application for parole would be reviewed by the latter board. If Acalotti is not paroled, a District Parole Board spokesman said, he will be eligible for "short-term release date" on August 26, 1951, if his behavior has been satisfactory.

Gov. Lane, Mahoney Clash Again

Chief Democratic Aspirants in Md. Exchange Blasts Over Platforms

Baltimore, Aug. 28 (AP).—The two main Democratic aspirants for the nomination for Governor exchanged uncomplimentary remarks about their platform statements today.

Both Gov. W. Preston Lane, jr., and George P. Mahoney outlined their 1950 campaign pledges over the weekend. Mahoney came out for an immediate reduction in the sales tax and its eventual elimination. Lane spoke out for eventual abolition of the real estate tax.

Mahoney also urged a 10 percent reduction in the personal income tax. The Governor stood for cuts in taxes as the State's financial situation would allow.

Lane's reaction to Mahoney's platform was that it promises "all things to all people" . . . without paying for them."

Mahoney contended the Governor's 1950 promises cannot be trusted because "he has failed to redeem the pledges of his 1946 platform."

Lane referred to former Republican Gov. Harry W. Nice who "promised $2 (automobile license) tags. He did it deliberately to catch votes. He got the votes, but did the people ever get the $2 tags?

"Mr. Mahoney, in his cynical effort to catch votes, is applying the $2 tag formula on a titanic scale."

Mahoney in a statement said that Lane in his 1946 platform said he wished to keep the Democratic Party from control by any bloc or pressure group.

"Mr. Lane has sold out his party to the political machine in Baltimore," Mahoney said, "and has made alliances with politicians throughout the State. He is building in Maryland a personal dynasty patterned on the Huey Long plan of power politics and is using your sales tax pennies to finance it."

Lane Lists Benefits To Allegany County

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 28 (AP).—Governor Lane spoke to citizens of Allegany County tonight about what his administration had done in the county on roads, schools and distribution of money.

In an address prepared for radio delivery, he said that between January 1, 1947, and the end of 1950 the State road program will have amounted to more than $5,700,000 in the county.

Lane said that in the year ended June 30, 1947, the State paid over to Allegany for school purposes a total of $804,827. This year the amount is $1,700,506. In addition, he said, there has been an allocation of $924,480 toward the construction of more schools.

The Governor noted that in the fiscal year 1947, Allegany's share of state-collected revenues was $1,251,130. This year it is $2,497,298.

Senate Contender To Tour Counties

He said his itinerary would be: August 29, Somerset and Worcester counties; August 30, Dorchester and Wicomico; September 1, Talbot and Caroline; September 2, Kent and Queen Anne's; September 6, St. Mary's, Charles and Calvert; September 7, Garrett and Allegany; September 8, Washington and Frederick; September 9, Howard and Montgomery; September 11, Prince George's and Anne Arundel; September 12, Baltimore and Carroll; September 14, Harford and Cecil.

Veteran Kills Self With Gun

A Manassas (Va.) man, who police said shot himself in the temple, then begged a neighbor to finish the job, died yesterday in Arlington Hospital.

He was Robert Wilson Smith, 28, a World War II veteran and a linesman for the Prince William County Electric Cooperative.

Manassas Town Policeman Charles Simms said Smith shot himself in the temple with a .22 caliber rifle about 7 p. m. Sunday in his home near Longview Park.

Then he walked to the home of a neighbor, J. M. Shay, and begged him to shoot him again, Simms said. Shay called police and an ambulance and Smith was removed to Arlington Hospital.

Simms said the man left a note, addressed to his wife, Luella, indicating family troubles. The Smiths were married about four months, Simms said. Mrs. Smith was at another neighbor's home at the time of the shooting, he said.

Failure to Pay for Buns Brings Ten Dollar Fine

A 40-year-old man yesterday was fined $10 because he ate four buns with his cup of coffee and only paid a dime for the coffee.

Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson imposed the fine on Paul Pittman, no known address, because police said Pittman underpaid his coffee klatch bill at a Barr Building eating place.

Youth, 19, Sought as Kidnaper Of Girl, 15, He Knew 3 Years

An extensive police search was on yesterday for a 15-year-old Landover Hills (Md.), girl and a 19-year-old youth charged with kidnaping her Sunday night.

The lookout was broadcast to 13 States along the Eastern seaboard.

The girl, Mary Christine Walter, left her home at 4114 71st ave., Landover Hills, shortly before midnight Sunday with the youth, Robert S. Armiger, according to her mother, Mrs. Stanley A. Walter. Armiger, a neighbor whom Christine has known for about three years, lives at 4602 72d ave.

In swearing out a kidnapping warrant against Armiger yesterday, Mrs. Walter told Prince Georges County police she feared her daughter was drugged.

One member of a group of young people who were at the Walter home earlier in the evening had a quantity of "some sort of drug," she said. She later noticed Christine was "nervous and upset" and had puncture marks on her forearm, Mrs. Walter said.

Because of the girl's condition, her mother said, she told her to stay home. However, the girl later drove off with Armiger.

The girl's father, night manager of a Cottage City service station, was at work at the time, Mrs. Walter said.

Christine, an eleventh-grade student at Bladensburg High School, has never been away from home without permission before, her mother said. She was described by her mother as an "obedient" girl and "very beautiful."

Armiger was closely associated with the Walter family for some time, Mrs. Walter said. This summer he accompanied them on a motor trip to the West Coast, she said.

The youth, a checker for the Safeway Stores, did not show up for work yesterday, police reported.

MARY CHRISTINE WALTER
. . . Object of wide police search

Police lookouts described Christine as 5 feet 5 inches, 120 pounds, brown-eyed and brown-haired. She was wearing a white blouse, red shorts and red loafers when she left her home. Armiger was said to be slender 5 feet 8 inches, 150 pounds, brown-eyed and brown-haired.

Bill to Limit District Cabs Withdrawn

Action Follows Senate 'Kills'; House Passes Six Minor Measures

The House yesterday passed a half dozen minor District bills, but a proposal to limit the number of taxicabs was withdrawn.

Chairman John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) withdrew the cab bill after objections by Representative John J. Rooney (D., N. Y.) and others. It was pointed out the Senate District Committee last week killed the same measure and hence House debate on the controversial proposal would be a waste of time.

These bills were passed, all by voice votes:

A bill to increase the cost of auto dealers' license tags. The measure goes to the White House.

A bill to tighten the architects' registration law, previously passed by the House. The House agreed to minor Senate amendments and sent the bill to the White House.

A bill to permit District public school teachers to take part in the Federal Government's teacher exchange program with foreign countries. An amendment was added, thus sending the measure back to the Senate, limiting to ten the teachers in any one year.

A bill to amend the District public school teachers' leave act, defining days of leave with pay as days exclusive of Saturdays, Sundays, holidays and vacations. The bill goes to the Senate.

A bill to define and regulate the practice of engineering and to create a Board of Registration for Professional Engineers, similar to other professional control boards. The bill goes to the Senate.

A bill to permit a swap of certain park lands in the District for land owned by the New Temple Committee, Inc. The bill goes to the Senate.

D. C. Marshal Plans Fire Evacuations

Fire evacuation plans for District government buildings are being drawn up under the supervision of the Fire Marshal's office, it was disclosed yesterday.

Acting Fire Marshal Roy Warfield said the planning is a safety precaution and is not linked directly with civilian defense.

This is the procedure, according to Warfield:

Inspectors from the Fire Marshal's office will visit every building owned or occupied by the District government and will make an inspection sheet, listing the building's fire hazards as well as safety aids. Then a fire safety plan will be drawn up in the Fire Marshal's office for each individual building.

The plan will list the fire exits and specify what monitors are needed for each area. The plan will be turned over to the superintendent of the building and it will be his responsibility to see that monitors are appointed and that a fire drill is held to see if the plan works smoothly.

Warfield said plans have been completed for the old Force School, at 1740 Massachusetts ave. nw., which houses Rent Control and Health Department offices, and the Soldiers and Sailors Home, at 921 Pennsylvania ave. se.

Fire safety plans are now being prepared for other structures, among them the District Building and various buildings used by the Board of Public Welfare and the Recorder of Deeds.

Park Policeman Burned In Basement Flash Fire

A Park policeman suffered burns yesterday when fumes from paint he was using flared up in a flash fire which did an estimated damage of $1000 to his Viers Mill Village, Md., home.

Pvt. Wesley Rosso, 26, of 12136 Viers Mill rd., received minor burns of the shoulder, face and hands when painting.

Current 'Apathy to Thinking' Stifles Philosophical Group

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

The world is too much with us; late and soon.
Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers.
We have given our hearts away, a sordid boon!
—Wordsworth.

The world has been too much with the Society for Philosophical Inquiry.

The society is no longer wth the world.

The society, in truth, is no longer. It has been dissolved—has, in philosophical terms, transcended from the existent Real to the nonexistent Ideal.

"Due," explained Secretary-Treasurer Glen H. Draper in the society's final—and bitter — announcement to the world, "to the . . . apathy of modern man to thinking . . ."

Worthy Past

This casualty to thoughtlessness has had a worthy past.

"It was founded," Draper said, "back in 1884 by United States Commissioner of Education William T. Harris. He taught philosophy at George Washington University."

Then followed to the presidency a Dr. Sterrett, also a philosophy professor at George Washington.

Finally, the society was headed by Dr. E. E. Richardson, who died last month. In tradition, Dr. Richardson taught philosophy at GWU. For 40 years he was president.

Vigorous Leader

Draper said the society seems to have died with Dr. Richardson, its leading light. A vigorous man, he was pastor emeritus of Congress Heights Baptist Church, a doctor of medicine, bachelor of science, master of science and doctor of philosophy.

But it was to Draper's lot to deliver the coup de grace.

A sad comment, but the society never attracted many. It met once a month "in season"—September through May or June.

Men sat around and discussed philosophy, particularly metaphysics, which considers and wonders at the nature of things rather than the things of nature. Men read philosophical papers, or listened to them.

Don't Want To Think

"But," Draper mused, "I have decided that people do not want to think."

If people at the last were not much concerned with the society, the society at the very end returned the favor.

It will go down in the annals of the society that the last paper read before that body concerned: "The Intelligence of a Bee."

Young Hits $260,000 Cut in D. C. Raid Fund

Commission Says U. S. Must Decide If There Is Need For Defense Here

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young put it squarely up to Congress yesterday to decide if there is any reason for civil defense preparations here.

Back from vacation to learn the House last Saturday cut the $290,000 fund to only $30,000, Young said:

"In my opinion the National Security Resources Board is right in urging our citizens to face up to the problem of civil defense.

"Either there is or there is not a need for preparing Washington against possible attack. If there is such a need, we will need $290,000 now and later a lot more. We should start spending it at once.

"It is up to Congress and the Federal Government to determine if such need exists."

Congress must vote the money since it acts as Washington's city council. This is despite the fact the money comes from District taxpayers and already is available.

Young is expected to go before the Senate Appropriations Committee in a few days, to ask the Senate to restore the $260,000 slashed by the House.

Meanwhile, the District Medical Society yesterday announced details of its course in treatment of A-bomb injuries.

The society will conduct a series of four-hour lectures on September 22, 26 and 29 for medical, governmental, nursing, pharmaceutical, dental and other groups. The lectures will be in cooperation with the Army Surgeon General's Office.

Dr. William D. Claudy, chairman of the society's subcommittee on medical education for atomic defense, said 1000 to 1500 persons are expected to take the 12-hour course at the Interior Department Auditorium.

Empire Cavein Claims Settled

Final settlement of the remaining litigations growing out of the December, 1947, collapse of the Empire Building, 9th and New York ave. nw., was announced yesterday.

David G. Bress, attorney for Owner Nick Papanicolas, said the M. Cladny Construction Co., agreed to cancel a lien of about $18,000 for work on the building, and add another $15,000 to be applied to reconstruction funds.

Cross-complaints betwen Papanicolas and the City Finance Co. were dropped by mutual consent, Bress said.

In January, suits for $1,250,000 damages were settled in District Court for $50,000. The settlement released the claim of 37 persons who sued as a result of the collapse in which four persons died.

Yesterday's settlement opened the way for Papanicolas to restore and rebuild the now-empty shell as a four-story, 54-room hotel, for which he announced plans in March.

The December 16 tragedy set off a three-months' investigation by building experts and District officials from which stricter building codes emerged. The building has stood for almost three years awaiting the outcome of the various litigations.

Major Road Projects Pushed In Maryland

Washington area newsmen yesterday took a look at some of the results of Maryland's 200 million dollar, five-year plan for road building.

The tour, which covered Montgomery, Howard, Anne Arundel and Prince Georges Counties, is one of seven being conducted this year by the State Roads Commission to publicize its program.

One of the projects inspected yesterday, is the new dual expressway between Washington and Annapolis. The sections now under construction extend west from Parole, Md. (about 2 miles west of Annapolis), to U. S. 301 and include several overpasses and bridges at South River and the Patuxent River.

The section of road from Parole to South River is now 86 percent complete. The section from South River to Route 301 is about half finished. The bridges over South River and the Patuxent were started in April and are both less than one third complete.

This portion of the road, designed eventually to become part of the North-South expressway linking Washington and the Chesapeake Bay Bridge, will cost $4,837,724. Money to bring the highway from Route 301 to Washington—about 12 miles—has not yet been authorized.

Another project inspected was the Washington-Baltimore expressway. This dual lane roadway is being built by Maryland from Baltimore 10 miles southwest to the Jessup rd. and by the Federal Government from Jessup rd. to Washington.

The Federal Government has spent about two million dollars grading and draining 6½ miles of its section. President Truman signed a bill August 4 authorizing completion of the Government's portion, but thus far the 13 million dollars necessary has not been appropriated.

One feature of the tour conducted by Walter C. Hopkins, deputy chief engineer of the State Roads Commission, was inspection of the mammoth interchange at the junction of the Baltimore-Washington expressway and the road to the Friendship Airport.

Work on this pattern of three dual lane highways and seven overpasses is about 62 percent complete and is to cost $1,600,300.

Other projects inspected included rebuilding of Wisconsin ave. as a divided highway from East-West hwy. to Glenbrook pkwy; construction of 5½ miles of divided highway from Pine Orchard to West Friendship as a relocation of Route 40 between Baltimore and Frederick, and widening and resurfacing of roads throughout the counties.

Due to Blindness

Lawyer Says CSC Denies Him Position

A 25-year-old lawyer petitioned District Court yesterday to help him get a Civil Service job which he said was denied him solely because he is blind.

He is Russell R. Kletzing, of Sacramento, Calif., a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of the University of California and now a non-status attorney with the Bureau of Reclamation. He has been totally blind since infancy.

Kletzing is asking for an injunction to force the Civil Service Commission to place him on the eligibility rolls for the post of junior professional assistant. The job initially will pay him less than his present position but holds promise, it was said, of ultimately higher pay and security.

He said that in 1949 he took examinations for the professional assistant post and passed them. Also, he said, the Public Health Service is willing to appoint him, but that it has been prevented from doing so by the Civil Service Commission action in his case.

The commission informed him, he declared, that there is no hope in his case for appointment.

He enclosed correspondence from the CSC stating that they could not accept him even though he hired a "reader" to help him in his work. Such a hiring, they said, would be against regulations, and that the decision was made after his case was "sympathetically evaluated."

He pointed out the fact that numerous blind persons have proven eminently successful in public and private life, and that there is a "national policy" to hire disabled persons wherever feasible.

He asked the court to find the CSC action in his case "arbitrary and discriminatory" and for an order restoring him to the rolls of the eligibles for appointment.

County Files Exceptions to A. B. & W. Hike

The Arlington County Board yesterday filed 14 exceptions to the recent recommendation of an Interstate Commerce Commission examiner for interstate fare increases for the A. B. & W. Transit Co.

The exceptions contend that A. B. & W. is not entitled to get fare increases based on increased operating expenses, since they are only secondary to the primary cause of the company's predicament, which is loss of traffic.

This decline in traffic has completely defeated a prior increase of fares, granted in October, 1948, and the transit company has failed to show it made diligent efforts to prevent the decline, the board contended through its attorney, Malcolm D. Miller.

Moreover, A. B. & W. has been providing less service at the higher fares, according to the exceptions, which add that another increase would probably be self-defeating since it would be unreasonable and excessive.

The board contends that the transit company failed to justify its various items of expenses; that it made the depreciation of buses and insurance expenses excessive and that its estimate of increased wage expenses was not adequately justified of record when it appeared before the examiner.

Under the examiner's recommendation, the fares would be increased generally by five cents in each zone. The increase would amount to 10 cents to and from certain points in Fairfax County.

Sen. Sparkman Stresses Role Of Physically Handicapped

Senator John J. Sparkman (D., Ala.) yesterday stressed the important part the physically handicapped can play "to meet the present challenge by a ruthless foe."

Speaking before delegates to the fifth biennial convention of the American Federation of the Physically Handicapped at the Hotel Statler, he said we must:

1. Take full advantage of the contributions the handicapped can make in the "mighty" production battle.

2. Prevent further increases in the number of physically handicapped.

3. Retrain and rehabilitate those who already are and who in the future may be handicapped.

"There is no question but that the physically handicapped aided tremendously during World War II," Senator Sparkman declared. But their needs must be met more adequately, he added.

He urged delegates not to despair if Congress takes no immediate action to help them.

"The game of legislature is a long, tedious process. Keep on with your battle for a better program of rehabilitation aid," he told delegates, while pledging his continued support.

The group also was promised support by Glenn E. Jackson, executive director of the Orthopedic Appliance and Limb Manufacturers Association. He said his group will do all possible to secure the best appliances for the handicapped, and added that they deprecate the publicity which has been given to devices not fully tested.

Earlier in the day, AFPH President Paul A. Strachan warned the group to be alert to the danger of Communists and others who may try to "worm their way" into AFPH.

Wants No Red Members

He said a constitutional amendment will be submitted to the convention to prevent anyone not taking the oath of allegiance to the United States from becoming a member of the group.

The federation "vigorously and vehemently" opposes the Douglas bill, which would take the President's Committee on National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week from the Labor Department to the Federal Security Agency, Strachan said.

He deplored the Government spending of more money to treat the diseases of cattle, sheep and hogs than to rehabilitate human beings, as he called on members to mobilize "the many powerful friends in Congress of the handicapped."

"Register and vote, and vote only for those who pledge themselves to vote for the AFPH program," he urged. He also asked that the fight be carried to all State Legislatures.

Falls Church Manager Pay To Be $12,000

The Falls Church City Council formally approved a $12,000 annual salary for its new city manager, Roy S. Braden, last night.

The figure represents an increase of $5200 over the salary paid former city manager Roy Dunn who was fired by the council August 2. Braden was employed August 14 with the "understanding" that he would draw the $12,000 salary.

The council also voted unanimously to give Dunn three months' severance pay, amounting to $1700.

The council approved a contract for trash and garbage collection in the city beginning September 1 at an annual cost of $17,880. The contract was awarded to C. B. Runyon of Falls Church, lower of two bidders.

Under the new contract, garbage will be collected twice weekly from all homes in the city while trash will be picked up twice a month. Cost of the service will be increased about $5000 in the coming year due to a population increase in the city, according to Braden.

On recommendation of the city manager, the council rejected a request by Fairfax County authorities that the city pay the cost of paving North Oak st. in front of the proposed new Falls Church elementary school. Although the school will be attended by Falls Church, pupils, it is outside the city limits and the city could not legally undertake the project, Braden said.

Braden was given authority, however, to apply to the Virginia Highway Department for State aid in paving the streets.

"An overexpenditure" of $11,000 in the city's recent and so far unsuccessful annexation suit against Fairfax County will be paid from surplus funds from last year's budget, the council decided. Braden was given authority to transfer the sum from the surplus account, which amounted to about $18,000 in the last fiscal year.

Arlingtonian Held As Impersonator Of FBI Agent

Richmond, Va., Aug. 28 (AP).—A 35-year-old Arlington man was being brought here today to face trial in Harrisonburg this fall on a charge of impersonating an FBI agent, the Richmond FBI office reported.

Charles Kessler Wheatley, traveling under the alias of Charles D. Womach, was arrested yesterday near Portsmouth, Ohio, by the Ohio State Patrol, according to R. D. Auerbach, agent-in-charge of the Richmond office. Auerbach said Wheatley went to a Luray hotel early this month, identified himself as an FBI agent and called for a reservation for J. Edgar Hoover. The hotel management became suspicious, Auerbach said, when Wheatley left later without paying his $54 bill. No Arlington address was available for Wheatley.

Virginia Law On New Auto Sales Voided by Judge

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 28 (AP). — A new State law that permitted sale of new cars only by enfranchised dealers was declared unconstitutional today by Judge Clyde H. Jacob in Circuit Court.

Judge Jacob said it was "special legislation for a special class of people who have franchises to sell new cars."

The effect of the ruling is that any automobile dealer may sell any car he can legally obtain, and he may advertise a new car as such.

The decision came as the result of a suit brought by Centre Motor Co. against C. F. Joyner, jr., Commissioner of Motor Vehicles.

The new Fourteenth Precinct stationhouse, at 42d st. and Benning rd. ne., will not be ready for use before September 15, the Police Department was informed yesterday.

Help Pledged In Alexandria 'Drunk Drive'

Alexandria officials yesterday were promised the "full cooperation" of the Virginia Alcoholics Beverage Control Board in their campaign to rid the city's streets of drunks and panhandlers.

The assurance was given by Clyde W. Saunders, the board's director of enforcement, at a closed meeting of a special committee appointed to cope with the problem. Other details were withheld by Councilman Marshall J. Beverley, chairman, who said he would present a full report to the council September 19.

Saunders came from Richmond at the request of Beverley who had asked the State liquor board to deny licenses to several "disreputable" taverns frequented by chronic drunks. He was accompanied by four representatives of the liquor control board.

Illness prevented Police Court Judge James R. Duncan from attending the meeting. He had been invited, according to Beverley, with a view to setting up a program of sterner punishment for chronic offenders.

Tradition Takes a Back Seat

Bride Wears Blue in Wedding Fashion Parade

By Peggy Preston

THERE was a time, not so long ago, when every costume worn by members of a bridal party had to be precisely matched. The rule was strict, and applied to fabric, color and design.

However, in recent years, the ruling has been gradually discarded. Variety is the keynote to ttoday's most carefully thought-out wedding ensembles. Brides who possess an imaginative eye for color and design can indulge in fashion whims that would have been considered shocking by grandmother's standards.

For example, while the bride herself may chose traditional satin or lace, she may dress each of her attendants in a different fabric, color and style of dress. The petite, blue-eyed maid of honor may wear tulle and lace; the statuesque matron of honor, sophisticated brocade; the tailored bridesmaid, a crisp taffeta.

Attendants Are Happier This Way

BY thus dressing each attendant in a gown befitting her type and coloring, the whole bridal scene becomes lovelier. It makes for happier attendants, too. Each girl has a dress that is individualized to her own type. It is one that she will want to wear again and again, instead of packing it away with memories of the wedding, happens with so many attendant's dresses.

Typical of such a practice was the group of bridal costumes shown by Mme. Louise Brune, Washington designer, at a recent fashion show for the benefit of the Arlington Rose Association.

Staged in the garden of the estate of Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Broyhill in Arlington, the showing was climaxed with a bridal scene entitled "Starlight Wedding." Using the glitter of hundreds of sequins and rhinestones to simulate starlight, the designer managed to make every costume in the briday procession a singular one.

Pale Ice Blue The Basic Color

PALEST ICE BLUE was the basic color. Shades of lavender, pink and green were accessory tones. The bridal gown, worn by a tall, stately blond, was simple and traditional in design, cut with long, tight sleeves and cathedral train. The train-length veil was of imported blue illusion. Novel touch was the head-piece, a halo of satin stitched with sparkling blue sequins.

Irridescent lavendar taffeta, fading from deep violet into green, was used in the maid of honor's costume. The color was particularly effective with the dark coloring of the model. With it she wore a little pancake beret covered with an all-over design of lavender and silver sequins. For the sophisticated matron of honor, the designer made a slim, wrap-around gown of Italian satin brocade, traced with flower bouquets in pink and lavender threads. Her hat was of fresh gardenias, dyed to match the tones of the dress.

By Joseph Armstrong—The Washington Post

THE BRIDAL color scheme used by Washington designer, Mme. Louise Brune, combines ice blue, pink and lavender. Bride's gown (right), is of blue satin, her imported tulle veil in the same shade and held with a sequin sprinkled halo. Maid of honor's costume is of irridescent lavender taffeta, cut with billowing skirt and strapless bodice over which is worn a tiny bolero. Her hat is entirely covered with matching sequins. The gowns were photographed at Broy-Hill, home of Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Broyhill, during the fashion show for the benefit of the Arlington Rose Association

Wed in Double Ring Ceremony

Miss Joan Warmack of Atlanta, Ga., became the bride of Dr. George C. Buchanan of Bethesda, Md., on Saturday, August 5, at 3 p. m. in the chapel of the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Daniel C. Buchanan, father of the bridegroom. The bride wore a gown of plum colored lace over taffeta, and carried an old fashioned bouquet of a lavender orchid and white and American beauty roses. She was attended by Miss Juanita Haskew of Mobile, Ala. Daniel C. Buchanan, jr., was best man for his brother.

The bride is a graduate of the School of Nursing of Emory University, and is an Ensign in the United States Naval Medical Corps. She is stationed at the National Naval Medical Center in Bethesda. Dr. Buchanan, a graduate of Duke University and of the Johns Hopkins Medical School where he also took his internship, accepted a commission last year in the United States Naval Medical Corps, and is also stationed in Bethesda.

Vine Leaves On Menu at Jagos' Party

NOTHING could have been more appropriate than the savory cocktail snacks which lured guests to the buffet at Mr. and Mrs. John W. Jago's garden party yesterday afternoon. The party honored the new U. S. Ambassador to Greece and Mrs. John Peurifoy, and the new U. S. Ambassador to Saudi Arabia and Mrs. Raymond A. Hare.

Right in the Near East tradition were the cocktail delicacies prepared for these eastward-bound diplomats. "Mezethas" are Greek-style hors d'oeuvres, and the Jagos had an assortment of them to offer: hot cheese-filled pastries, tiny spiced meatballs and yes, even stuffed vine leaves.

How did the hostess accomplish this culinary feast? Easy enough. She has a Greek cook, brought to Washington right from the shadow of the Parthenon. Before assuming his present post as executive director of Near East, African and South Asian affairs at the State Department, Mr. Jago served at our embassy in Greece.

Among yesterday's guests, numbering chiefly State Department officials, were Assistant Secretary of State George C. McGhee, Assistant Secretary of State Jack K. McFall, Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Hulton, Mr. and Mrs. Haywood P. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur G. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Hughes, Mr. and Mrs. Howard K. Travers, Mr. and Mrs. Hervey L'Heureux, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Pick, jr., Mrs. R. P. Butrick, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel K. C. Kopper, Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Wilber, Burton Y. Berry, Carlisle H. Humelsine, Fred H. Awalt, Leonard Cromie and many others.

Diplomatic Circles On the Move

The Colombian Ambassador and Sra. Zuleta-Angel were hosts at a small dinner Sunday night, entertaining at Normandy Farm. Their guests included United States Ambassador and Mrs. Donald Wiley; Sr. Vincente Martinez, Governor of the State of Bolivar in Columbia, and Sra. Martinez, and Sr. and Sra. Amaury Zelaz. Ambassador Wiley, now our envoy to Persia, was formerly United States Ambassador to Colombia.

Honduran Envoy Honored at Dinner

Among those in attendance were the Ambassador of Guatemala and Senora de Carrera, Dr. Jorge Basadre, Director of the Department of Cultural Affairs of the PanAmerican Union, and Senora de Basadre; the Counselor of the Chilean Embassy and Senora de Guzman-Cruchaga, Dr. and Senora Ermilo Abreu-Gomez, and Miss Muna Lee.

Is Marriage Based on Needs of Companionship Better Than No Marriage at All? Having Failed To Find Loyal Mutual Love, Woman of 40 Wonders

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Is a marriage based on companionship and understanding, even without love, better than no marriage at all? I am a woman of 40 and have never been married.

Twice I have planned to marry. The first time I was in an accident and when I recuperated, after being in a cast for a year, the man had married someone else. A few years later I fell in love again and very much wanted to mary at the time, but this man wanted to wait until after the war. When he returned after two years' absence, I found I didn't love him as I had at first, so I moved to another city in search of new opportunities.

Since then I've had other marriage proposals which I refused, as I didn't love the men who asked. Now I am 40 and beginning to wonder if love means so much any more.

She Is Drifter and Easily Bored

DURING the last year I went with a fine man my own age, who is well educated, ambitious and dependable, and whom I greatly respect and admire, but do not love. I know Henry loved me and he often said he would give anything in the world if I loved him. I could have married him, but instead I moved away I felt this was bad for both of us; that it would be unfair to stay in my state of mind. But I have been very lonely since; I miss his wonderful companionship.

Looking back over the years I wonder if I have expected too much. I wonder now if marriage based on companionship and understanding, even without love, isn't better at my age than no marriage at all? Do you think such a marriage could be a happy one? Or would it fail because I did not love the man, and also because I have been independent for so long?

I've traveled a great deal and always have been able to adjust to any mode of life very easily, but I would get bored with people and jobs and places. However, I have changed a great deal lately; I am tired of traipsing around. I really want to settle down—if it isn't too late. L. G.

Seeks Security, Overlooks Living

DEAR L. G.: It appears that your life may be likened to a vast plain of loneliness, in which you have searched hither and yon for an oasis of contentment, never finding sanctuary anywhere. This sensation of being a lone traveler in life, somehow unable to catch up with the procession, or with a vision of fulfillment that remains just out of reach, isn't uncommon. But it isn't so much a symptom of "expecting too much" as it is proof that one hasn't known how to relate himself to the main body of society.

In one sense, your years have been lost in a perpetual day dream. In another sense, you've been self imprisoned in an isolated lower, because you wouldn't use the exit key, while you've waited for "the good life" to flood in and carry you out on the crest of the wave. It is an old saying that "Life is what you make it,"—and all the life you'll ever have is simply an extension of what goes on now, today, this very hour, in your experience.

To live realistically, as a physical being and social being, one must address himself sturdily to "what is" in his present environment. If the situation seems a blighted area as compared to his heart's desire, still he'll never profit by holding aloof from it. It is only here-and-now that one can invest his talent in the Biblical sense, and give contributive account of his stewardship,—i.e., his capacity to make something good of being alive.

Needs to Realize Importance of Now

In remarking that your life henceforth can only be an extension of what goes on today, I don't mean that you can't revise and improve and enrich the substance of your experience. You can and should; but you can only do it now. And to the extent that you do, you are the architect of your future.

But the most critical and urgent truth about living is this—yesterday is gone and tomorrow never comes. You are alive only now, from moment to moment. This is the only "time" you have, in which to "be" in accordance with your best aspirations. Jesus emphasized this in saying "Let the dead past bury its dead;" and "Take no thought of the morrow," and "Now is the day of salvation."

So much for preface, the purpose of which is to waken you to the importance of being alive, and of "living" now. Your questions about marriage completely miss the point of what you need to know. It seems to me that marriage, just for the sake of anchorage, isn't of first importance to your salvation.

To marry in desperation, more or less, which is your present pitch, reflects infantile anxiety, not interest in the partner,—and without such interest you cannot experience understanding or companionship, no matter how fine the other person's character might be. For advice, read Dr. Rudolf Dreikurs' book, "The Challenge of Marriage" (Duell, Sloan & Pearce), which should help you find your way out of confusion. M.H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Your Figure, Madame

'Seeing Is Believing' for Reducers

By Ida Jean Kain

HOW'S your will power? To help you keep slimming, here are a few booster reports from reducers who are doing just fine, thank you . . .

Seeing is believing: "I had tried dieting before, but always slipped back into careless eating habits, kidding myself that I could then really eat since I had lost a few pounds. This pernicious system has a way of resulting in an overall average gain year after year. But that new psychological approach works for me. My full-length mirror tells me who's boss—me or my stomach. I force myself to look at my bulges honestly, and as I see myself getting flatter in front and slimmer at the sides, I'm satisfied. My next dress will be one size smaller, and I feel so good . . . peppier and justifiably smug because I am winning a battle."

Feel like a million: "Overweight is something I have always had to fight, and the last few years it seemed I just didn't have the will to do it. But I was very uncomfortable with a weight of 190 pounds, since I am only 5 feet, 3 inches tall. You see, I really had to do something about it. So I went on the Will Power Building Diet, and three months later I had lost 30 pounds. I go through an exercise routine every morning when there is peppy music on the radio. I am 59 years old, and I feel young . . . like a million dollars"

Keeping normal weight: "I've intended writing you before to tell you my story of dieting. While our son was overseas, I decided to take off excess weight. It helped me a lot, when I wanted to eat more, to think how our boys were doing without. I lost 30 pounds and went from a size 42½ to 16½. After seeing this, many of my friends tried to diet but gained back all they lost because they belong to bridge clubs, etc., and eat more than three meals a day. I find that at my age (over 50), having less work to do, I don't require a lot of food. I feel as though I have taken years off my age . . . and it has been a great satisfaction to know I could exert that much self-control.

And for dessert: "Two months ago my doctor advised me to lose 35 pounds. In a way I was glad to hear him tell me to reduce, because I was so dissatisfied with myself and put out that I was so big and pudgy. But I was scared silly that I just couldn't lose all that weight. I have four growing children who seem to be forever yelling, 'Hey, Mom, what's good to eat?' In order to keep them happy, I try always to have some kind of a treat around . . . and that's my Waterloo. However, much to my surprise, two months have passed and 14 excess pounds with them. A great part of my losing those 14 pounds painlessly and in good humor has been due to your daily morale builders which have set me straight in my thinking. Now, instead of eating desserts with the family, I read your column and get more satisfaction and enjoyment out of it than I ever did out of a hunk of cake or a gooey, fattening sundae. May your column always be there for dessert!

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

ONE of the signs of both intelligence and maturity is the ability to get along with other persons. There will always be differences of custom, practice and opinion among individuals but this does not mean that they need fight because of them.

Children have to learn to get along with their contemporaries and parents are the interpreters who help them to compromise their differences. They should understand that all children will not want to do as they do and that they should make an effort to learn to associate with them without quarrelling and discord.

Mrs. W. S. says she has never had a quarrel with a neighbor but now this person is acting in a childish way. "Her boy is three and mine is six," she writes. "He is at our house all the time and takes everything away from others. My boy resents this and therefore has been hitting him. I am not condoning this and I have whipped him hard for it and made him stay at home. I have quit this now for it could all be avoided if her boy would stay at home. He cries, whether or not he is hurt, and she has taught him to hit back and has even sent him up with a ball bat to hit my boy.

"The mother feels ugly toward me because my boy ran into hers and cut the bridge of his nose with the wagon tongue. My boy doesn't bother him, why does he continue to come here?"

He is probably hungry for companionship, valueless as it has been. Children of these disparate ages have nothing in common except their childishness. The boy of 6 has far different interests and the child of 3 is unable to compete with him and they can only play together on the basis of master and slave.

Talk it over with this mother calmly. Assure her the boy is welcome in your home—as you expect your boy to be welcome in hers—but you cannot assume entire responsibility for what happens in their association, as you haven't the time for supervision.

Unless both children want to play together badly enough so that they themselves make the effort to get along amiably, it would be far better for the three-year-old to associate with children nearer his own age with whom he would be on a par mentally and physically.

Nails, Needles and Pins Star in Evening Classes Offered to D. C. Housewives

THERE MAY be "no royal road to learning" but Washington offers lots of paths in that direction if you're energetic enough! Many of your neighbors are, judging by the recent crop of questions about adult classes.

DEAR ANNE:

I saw a letter in your column about adult education and am writing to inquire if you know of other classes which are to be conducted this fall—in millinery training.

Jeanne Payne, Annapolis, Md.

Both the YWCA and the Public Evening Schools of the District of Columbia will teach millinery this fall.

The "Y" will have morning, afternoon and evening classes—one in trimming and remodeling, another on advanced fabric and felt work, and a consultative course. For more information, write the "Y" at 17th and K sts. nw., Washington 6, D. C. Classes begin the week of September 25.

The District School system will offer both elementary and advanced workshop courses in hat making, in the evenings. To learn more about these, drop a card to: Evening Schools, Public Schools of the District of Columbia, Roosevelt High School, Washington. The semester starts September 11.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you give me any information as to where I can take a carpentry course?

Mrs. G. J., Washington.

The Evening Schools of the District of Columbia Public Schools list a carpentry course for their fall semester. It will meet at the Bell Vocational School. You can telephone Sterling 6111, Extension 382, for more information.

DEAR ANNE:

Is there any class offered in the District that would help a young working girl do a better job of housekeeping? My husband and I both work and come home tired in the evenings, I'd like to know about short cuts I could take, food buying, cleaning, and other things that would make home-making less painful for one in my circumstances.

A. L. T., Washington.

The Department of Agriculture will have a class in its Graduate School this fall that seems to fill the bill as far as you are concerned.

Called "Modern Home-making for Employed Men and Women," it will include popular lectures by specialists who will give up-to-the-minute, practical information on homemaking for the busy family. Topics covered will include family financial planning; menu planning; buying food; selecting the home; selecting and arranging home furnishings, and many others. The class will meet on Monday evenings from 6 to 8 o'clock in the Department of Agriculture. Registration starts September 16. For more information, request a bulletin from the Graduate School. The telephone there is Republic 4142, extension 6337.

FOR A REAL dessert treat, make late summer peaches into fine, old-fashioned cobbler. Mix an extra rich biscuit crust using: 5 tablespoons lard, 2 cups sifted flour, 1 tablespoon baking powder, ½ cup sugar, ½ to 2/3 cup milk, and ¾ teaspoon salt. Roll it out ¼-inch thick and line an 8-by-12-inch baking pan. Fill with a mixture of: 4 cups (2 pounds) sliced peaches, ¾ cup sugar, ¼ cup corn syrup, 1 tablespoon cornstarch, ½ teaspoon almond extract and ½ teaspoon salt. Make openwork crust on top and bake at 450 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes

Woodwork Wonders Are Easy With Ready Mades

When in doubt, keep them simple! That's the smart advice that the September American Home gives on woodwork features. This issue presents a number of attractive Colonial doors, mantels and cabinets reproduced from authentic designs of years ago and adapted by modern-day architects and designers to fit into more up-to-date backgrounds. And you can buy each of these ready-made from your local lumber or millwork dealer, at a reasonable price and ready for use.

One on the Aisle—

That Water 'Kate' Cracked a Record

By Richard L. Coe

"KISS ME, KATE" moved out of town yesterday with $76,000 for its two weeks at the Watergate, thus breaking the city's live entertainment record . . . The musical took in $45,000 for the final seven nights, with Friday's audience of 5000 paying $8500 for the performance . . . The previous record seems to be "Oklahoma!" which nabbed $39,000 in the 1680-seat National the week the theater closed two years ago; there may have been a few higher takes for the National, but according to the National records yesterday, the $39,000 at a $4.80 top was as high as the strictly limited capacity could go.

THE WATERGATE success has them sitting up and panting in New York and there's talk of a long season of musicals on the banks of the Potomac next summer . . . One hopes, however, that a few things will be remembered, among them: "Kate" was a good show, well played; it got public applause and dough because it was good . . . The same rewards will not necessarily go to sleazy or sloppy productions . . . Nor would anything but a big, broad musical do for the sightlines of thousands, so let's not have any talk of grabbing a big profit on modestly-budgeted hits, such as "The Consul," which demands a small, indoor theater . . . Also, next year let's have a definite time and radio station to let people know whether the threat of rain will postpone a performance; more consideration should be shown the public on that score.

THE NATIONAL'S William Kurtz also came across another box office figure of some note: the last time "Blossom Time" was here, at a $2.50 top for 10 performances in one week, the take was a juicy $28,000 . . . Small wonder the Shuberts hold on to that one, which, by the way, will probably be revived in Gotham this year with John Charles Thomas as Franz Schubert.

BALLET THEATER opened its London season last night with Covent Garden sold out for all performances . . . Ambassador Lewis Douglas has cabled President Truman that the ANTA-backed ballet company has had remarkable success at the Edinburgh Festival and that seats for the Venice Festival performances also are sold out . . . Greatest praise has been for Agnes de Mille's "Fall River Legend," with its Bernstein score, and Nora Kaye's superb "Pillar of Fire."

THE NEW YORK Roxy has a unique bill starting Friday, T. Power in "The Black Rose" on the screen, whis is not unique, and Dmitri Mitropoulos leading the New York Philharmonic-Symphony on the stage, which certainly is. . . . The great orchestra and its celebrated conductor will be playing four and five shows a day, of 45 minutes each, in full dress regalia at "no advance in prices." . . . The show folk will be watching this closely. . . . What's the matter with our Capitol junking its stage bill for one week and letting Howard Mitchell and the National Symphony take over?

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE: Maurice Evans will costar with Ethel Barrymore in a new screen version of that polite melodrama, "Kind Lady" . . . What will that do to "The Devil's Disciple" skedded for the Guild subscription season at the Gayety? . . . Lionel Barrymore, by the way, is telling about "We Barrymores" in the Saturday Evening Post . . . Hazel Markel, of WTOP, mulling a part for Olney's "Post Road" . . . Judith Evelyn, ensconced in Olney's star bedroom for a week of her "Angel Street," no doubt still filled with memories of that freakish "Geting Married" tour for ANTA, a collection of stars which finally blew-up in Los Angeles . . . Or, Judith, is the word fizzled-out?

LISA GARDINER and Mary Day, who'd have liked that Ballet Theater news, vacationing—and postcarding—from Guatamala . . . Sadja Stokowski, the conductor's beautiful 19-year-old daughter, finishing an ECA stint and bound for her final Radcliffe year, applauding "She Stoops to Conquer" at the Arena . . . Jimmy Lake tapping his feet at "Kiss Me Kate" and chuckling to his missus, the Mayoress of Ninth st., about little Bobby Vail's last time through on the Gayety burlesque wheel . . .

RUDULPH JUSTICE Watson, arriving at Olney for a part with ZaSu Pitts in "Post Road"; Civic theatergoers knew him as Rudy Watson, but he's been working in a wide assortment of professional things such as "Bloomer Girl" and "Pygmalion" since . . . Remember when Secretary of Defense Johnson was all for getting rid of the Marines? . . . Since the Corps hit the Korean headlines, the movie companies also have gone back to the Marines, revivng "Wake Island" and "So Proudly We Hail" and Republic now announces three more that stretch way back: "The Leathernecks Have Landed," "Join the Marines" and "Come On, Leathernecks."

SHADOW PLAY: Gene Nelson and his wife, Miriam Franklin, perfect some of Gene's steps for "Tea for Two," coming to the Warner screen Thursday. The fast-rising young dancer was in the cast of "This Is the Army"

Space Found For Family Of Corbins

The woes that beset the family of Wilfred A. Corbin, following its eviction from an Alexandria home August 14, have eased temporarily.

Homes for all nine children in the family have been obtained through the cooperation of relatives, Corbin said. He said he has been assured the children and their mother "will have a roof over their heads as long as they need it."

Seven of the children have been given shelter in an eight-room house at Charlottesville, Va., by James L. Wright, Mrs. Corbin's brother, who offered his home to them after reading of their plight in The Washington Post. Two of the children will remain with relatives in Alexandria.

The mother, has 5-day-old daughter, and two other children went to Charlottesville Sunday night. Yesterday a friend of the Corbin family drove four more of the youngsters to their uncle's home.

Two of the children had been placed in a Catholic home and two more had been given shelter until yesterday's developments by the Alexandria Welfare Department in a foster home.

With the mother and her new baby in Alexandria Hospital, eight of the children had spent an entire night and part of one day in Corbin's Alexandria tavern while he tried desperately to find them a home.

He found the eight children on his hands after a relative in Fredericksburg who had cared for them since the eviction wrote him an urgent letter saying she could keep them no longer.

ARE YOU AN "AVERAGE AMERICAN?"

You can see how close you come to the mythical average American when you read the Gallup Poll "Americana" series, starting Wednesday in The Washington Post. This series covers some of the things the 1950 U. S. Census doesn't cover—physical characteristics, tastes and preferences, family life, recreation and attitudes toward marriage.

Look for these surveys in The Washington Post

Wednesday, August 30	—Physical Characteristics
Friday, September 1	—Marriage and Children
Sunday, September 3	—Recreation
Monday, September 4	—Family Life
Wednesday, September 6	—Tastes and Preferences

Be sure to see the first of these reports on the habits, quirks and foibles of the American people tomorrow.

The Washington Post

Are We Alert Against Attack?

Cooperation Vital for A-Bomb Defense

This is the second of a series of five articles, which tell the story of America's preparations for a possible atomic attack. George W. Herald was a press association bureau chief in Berlin and Vienna from 1945 to 1949. He served during the war in a United States Army Airborne Supply unit, and as deputy chief of the German section of the American Broadcasting Station in Europe.

CHAPTER TWO

In an unpretentious office on Manhattan's East Side, Gen. Lucius D. Clay is planning for a battle he hopes he'll never have to fight.

As chairman of the New York State Civil Defense Commission, the general is preparing the Nation's most vital target area against atomic attack. It's a tough job, but he is tackling it with the same cold sense that enabled him to save Berlin after the Russian blockade.

"What would you do, sir, if Alaska radar stations reported a group of enemy bombers flying south?" I asked him. "Would you sound the alert?"

"Not until I knew where the planes were heading for," he answered with a grin. "I wouldn't want our population to spend hours in the shelters for nothing."

"Well, how much advance notice would you be able to give the public?"

"Mind you, there may be no warning at all," the general replied. "Perhaps the planes will slip through our radar net and surprise us. We must count on the worst.

"Otherwise, 15 minutes ought to be enough to get everyone into the shelters. Even five minutes may make a lot of difference."

"Won't many people try to drive out into the country as soon as the alert is on?"

"We won't let them. We'll stop all traffic, just as the British did during the last war. People on the highways would make ideal targets for enemy planes."

Program Ready

General Clay has worked out a detailed program to put all communities in his teritory in a state of readiness. A brightly lit map of New York State on the wall to his right indicated the progress he had already made.

"We believe in self-help," he told us. "Every town and county has to organize its own protection. There are 107 such communities in New York State and 67 have already appointed civil defense directors. The others will follow suit shortly."

As the general explained, each of these districts is going to have its public shelters, fire-fighting machines, emergency hospitals, food stocks, and so forth. If one of them is struck from the air, the other 106 will rush to its aid with everything they have.

"Who is going to pay for all this?" we inquired.

"The communities will have to do the financing themselves," the general answered. "That's the American tradition. If the costs grow beyond their resources, the State and Federal Governments will pitch in. My job is to coordinate all these efforts and give guidance where needed."

General Clay is quickly breathing life into a complex defense system that, until a few weeks ago, existed only on paper. Here are some of the measures he has already taken:

Started the A-bomb training of doctors, nurses, fire fighting units, auxiliary police and firemen, stretcher bearers, rescue workers, mobile medical and welfare teams.

Provided for the mass care in form of food and clothing for air raid victims and their prompt evacuation over special routes to emergency rest centers.

Scheduled health measures such as mass immunization, food inspection, mutual water supply to prevent epidemics after atomic attack.

I asked General Clay whether he felt that all States of the Union ought to make similar extensive preparations.

"The degrees of danger vary widely, of course," he replied. "We can assume that an enemy would drop his precious bombs only on important industrial areas and centers of civilian population. But such areas exist all over the country. Even where they don't, the authorities should draft relief plans for a national emergency. Let's not forget that we are going to be in this all together."

Apart from the New York area, the following places are officially regarded as the most likely targets: Washington, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Chicago, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Philadelphia, Birmingham, Oak Ridge, Hanford and the Boulder, Grand Coulee and Norris dams. But that leaves out a lot of others.

As one of the general's aides pointed out, 60 percent of the United States population lives in cities occupying less than 3 percent of our territory. Thirty percent is in communities of 100,000 or more than one million, 5 percent in New York alone.

"It is up to every thinking citizen to weigh the chances of his home town being attacked," General Clay concluded. "Cities of borderline importance will probably continue to show little concern, yet some of those who expect it the least may be the most deeply involved. In my view, home defense has become a matter of highest priority in our national security system."

'Studs' Place' Goes Off the Video Air

—By John Crosby—

THIS will be the last column for a short interval, my yearly week of repose, when the radio and television set in this house remain off. It's been a long and, on the whole, arid summer.

CROSBY

There was one particularly depressing incident, recently. "Studs' Place," a Chicago show which was warm, appealing, imaginative and—above all—sensible, has been yanked off the television or very high frequency air. It is the sort of thing that makes a man bitter. The yak, shows, the endless panel shows, the interminable dancing and singing variety shows—which in our house are called hoof-and-mouth programs—all these remain and "Studs' Place," an earnest attempt to depict real nice people in plausible situations, goes off.

Studs had more fans than he perhaps realize. Not long ago I made my annual pilgrimage to the country shrine of that well-known Broadway sage, Mr. William Rose, and Studs Terkel may be happy to learn that the Roses were among his great admirers. Continuing my research on another tennis court, I came upon a real, live advertising man, first one I'd ever seen in such a strange environment. He told me he had undertaken a personal crusade to get Studs a sponsor. No soap. I guess your name has to be Berle. It has to have a curtain and an audience and a 14-piece orchestra and a lot of high-powered and expensive names. It makes a man, as I say, bitter.

I GOT SO distressed about the situation that I consulted that other wise man of these parts, Mr. Goodman Ace, about the state of television this summer.

"We've enjoyed television very much this summer," Mr. Ace reported. "We've got a 6-foot screen now, you know."

"A 6-foot screen!" I exclaimed. "Oh, no, 6 feet?"

"Yes, it's a Japanese screen," he explained. "We have it in front of the television set."

I hung up to allow Mr. Ace to continue his research on atom bomb defense. It was Mr. Ace, you know, who recommended that everyone take refuge on the eleventh floor of the Columbia Broadcasting System in case of an atom bomb attack. No radioactivity up there, he claimed.

LET'S SEE NOW. One thing I always do before taking to the hills is to clean out the desk drawers and the other is to hand out the annual Crosby Awards, easily the least-coveted awards in broadcasting. This is almost a simultaneous operation. Anyone whose name is still in the drawer gets one. First on the list this year is the award for music criticism which goes to Samuel Goldwyn. Mr. Goldwyn for reasons which I imagine are obscure even to him, was a disc jockey over WNBC for a while this summer.

"When sound first came to motion pictures," said Goldwyn, "the music was borrowed from the old masters—Beethoven, Bach, Mozart, but it seemed wrong."

So much for music criticism. We pass on to the annual sports award which goes to the announcer of a recent Yankee-Tiger game, who said—and I quote—"That was one of the greatest catches I've ever seen from the standpoint."

It so happened I saw the catch, this encounter being on television, and I would go even farther than this announcer. I would say it was one of the greatest catches, including that of. Irregardless. In fact, from any standpoint, you can't.

House Race Decided By Six-Vote Margin

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 28 (AP).—State Senator Frank Smith was high man by six votes in the Third Congressional District race in the Mississippi primary election last Tuesday.

Unofficial tabulations had given State Senator Oscar Wolfe a five vote edge.

Today's figures giving Smith 6781 votes and Wolfe 6775 were announced by the State Democratic Executive Committee after officially canvassing the vote.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Bill Gold is on vacation. His column today takes the form of a letter to his managing editor.

Dear Boss:

As one of the Nation's select group of 50,000-watt clear channel stations, Cincinnati's WLW for a long time dominated not only the local area but a good chunk of the Midwest.

For awhile, the "Nation's Station" had an experimental license to use a half-million watts—10 times the power permitted any other American station. In the vicinity of its transmitter, folks were getting WLW programs on their downspouts and wire fences.

As news director of 250 watt WCPO, I often dreamed of the day we could compete with the Crosley station on an equal footing. And (sob!) now that I don't work in Cincinnati any more, that day has come.

WLW still throws the best radio signal in town; but in the television field it's on an equal footing with two competitors, WCPO-TV and WKRC-TV.

The former is the Cincinnati Post station, the latter the Cincinnati Times-Star (Taft family) outlet.

The Tafts are interested in their Transit Radio company, which is rapidly filling America's streetcars and buses with music. Thus far, TV seems to be a secondary undertaking with them.

But when the Post at long last got a facility equal to WLW, things really started to happen. Mortimer C. Watters, in charge of the Post's radio and video interests, vowed he'd start his programs earlier in the day, stay on the air later, and give the public more local shows.

In a matter of a few weeks, Mort's TV station was starting its broadcast day at 11 a. m. When the opposition stations followed suit, Mort backed up to successively earlier starting times, and forced them to lengthen their broadcast schedules again and again.

Currently, WCPO-TV hits the air at 6 a. m. and doesn't sign off until 1 a. m.—which is exactly the schedule followed by most radio stations. What's more, on Friday and Saturday he stays on all night, and he's already announced that in a few months he plans to give Cincinnatians a 24-hour television service, seven days a week.

The long-range effects of such programming are hard to guess. Mothers trying to get their kids ready for school while the small fry yowl that they want to watch the Crunchy Wunchy breakfast program may find themselves hoping that Mort Watters falls down a coal chute and breaks his leg. Husbands who expect their wives to sweep and dust and cook and mend sox may come home in the evening to find their women still glued to the television set—and it's entirely possible that a few irate husbands will eventually take direct action, in the form of an ax applied vigorously and repeatedly to the receiver's working parts.

On the other hand, of course, the long range effects on cities which have been Wattersized may be relatively mild. We humans have a way of adapting ourselves to periodic upheavals.

The short range effects of this expanded programming are readily visible. Cincinnati has gone "television nuts," and sales of sets in the area now total an amazing 250,000. (There are only a half million people in the city, and perhaps twice that number in the metropolitan area.)

Watters sneers at TV station operators who fear to expand their services. He says: "Every time we approached the break-even point in our operation, I added another hour to our broadcast day. That brought in more revenue to balance the additional expense, and gave us a chance to expand again. Meantime, the additonal programs sold thousands of additional receiving sets, and built a mass audience for television.

"Today, operating 19 hours a day for five days, and 24 hours on the other two days, we're almost breaking even again, and should be earning a profit in a few weeks. That's my idea of television's future in this country—a bold program of expansion, based on faith in a revolutionary new medium for reaching millions of people simultaneously."

o+o

As I say, boss, I can't argue with Watters, because that's like arguing with success. WLW's TV station has hopped on the bandwagon and is also in operation by breakfast time now, and even the Taft transmitter is trying to keep pace.

The whole city is affected by the battle, of course, and is watching its progress with keen interest. To some, television means unlimited entertainment or enlightenment; to some it means jobs and profits; to some it means a sensational new way of reaching great masses of people, and selling them anything from democracy to beer to soap.

But to all of us, it's going to mean a profound change in our living habits—and I'd kind of like to stick around for a few hundred years and see how it all works itself out.

o+o

I could write you another dozen letters about Cincinnati—about the Zoo Opera; the Over the Rhine saloons; the "Barbary Coast" along Central ave. (with only "The Cat and the Fiddle" still standing, in defiance of the passing years); the nonstop ball games on Deer Creek Common (now lighted so that the boys can also play at night); vast new Cincinnati Gardens, the sports area in which Secretary of Commerce Sawyer is an important figure; the College and Conservatory of Music; Bissingers and its famous candies—and Graeter's and its velvety ice creams; and I might even do a piece about the law against stand-up liquor drinking, which nobody ever enforces.

But I've bored you enough from one location, so we're moving along. Tomorrow it's "Wagons West" for us. Bill.

P. S.: Bernice remarks: "We're moving from the breweries of Cincinnati past the distilleries of Lawrenceburg toward the breweries of St. Louis. It's a good thing we're a temperate family."

Heavy Flow of Bibles Reported To Lands Behind Iron Curtain

A spokesman for the American Bible Association said yesterday that Bibles "are penetrating the Iron Curtain countries in great numbers."

Robert T. Taylor, general secretary of the society, said, "We don't smuggle Bibles, but we may deliver them to points from which they may be smuggled."

Taylor spoke before the weekly luncheon meeting of the National Capital Forge of the American Public Relations Association at Lee House, 15th and L sts. nw. His topic was "Public Relations and the Bible."

He said it was difficult to get across the idea that the Bible is "a rough, tough book," and that it is the conviction of too many church people that "anything connected with religion has to be dull."

Taylor told how publicity was responsible "for much of the increase in funds raised by direct mail. No matter how good a job you do, people won't pay much attention to it, unless they know about it."

General MacArthur's recent request for 10 million Bibles for Japan is being handled by the ABA, he aid in describing part of the work of the society.

"The ABA," he said, "is a nonprofit organization which serves as an agent for 50 religious denominations in translating, publishing and distributing the Bible without note or comment."

Youth Dies in 'Gang' War

Baltimore, Aug. 28 (AP).—An 18-year-old youth, Elmer F. Garrity, was charged with murder today in a fatal stabbing which occurred during an impromptu battle between two North Baltimore "gangs." This victim was Merrill Dopkins, 20.

Police said two rival groups were involved in the clash which resulted in one death. They called one the "Linden ave. gang" and the other the "North ave. gang."

Not Enough Delinquents

Youngstown, Ohio, Aug. 28 (AP). The Col. L. T. Foster Home for Girls has closed after providing for Mahoning County's delinquent girls for 29 years. The cause: Not enough delinquent girls in the county. There are only three girls in the home now.

Merry-Go-Round

Pentagon Snipes at Sec. Acheson

By Drew Pearson

Cabinet Changes—Some people around the White House have been angling to get Secretary of State Acheson and Secretary of Defense Johnson out of the Cabinet, but the angling hasn't come from Mr. Big himself. The other day a White House assistant approached Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire with the idea that he become Secretary of State. The proposition was hedged with such reservations as "I'm only talking for myself, you understand, but—." . . . Bridges said he wasn't interested . . . Undoubtedly the assistant told the truth when he said he was only talking for himself, because Truman invariably freezes his Cabinet members when they are under attack . . . What bothers him most is the fact that these two particular Cabinet members are at each others throats. You can't talk 10 minutes with Louey Johnson's staff—or sometime even with Johnson himself—without a crack against the Secretary of State.

Pearson

Ambition Burns Eternal—A friend was talking to Secretary of Defense Johnson. He said: "Mr. Secretary, a lot of people are talking about you for President."

"Oh, I'm not interested in that," said Louey condescendingly.

A minute later, however, he asked:

"Were they important people?"

Balloons to Russia — Soviet spokesmen are livid over the propaganda balloons being released in western Germany, so much so that one broadcaster devoted most of his air time last week to denouncing these baloons . . . The present balloon idea is not quite the same as that proposed by this writer two years ago, but nevertheless is effective. The balloons are given visitors to the Marshall Plan exhibition in Bremen, West Germany, with instructions to release them with a postcard to communists in East Germany . . . Being small, the balloons can not float to Russia, but apparently are raising cain with Russianized Germany . . . Since the winds blow steadily from Germany into Russia, it would be a simple matter to float larger balloons into Russia itself carrying propaganda messages, soap, tea, or even small radio sets.

Wire-Tapping: — Here's part of the closed-door testimony by Lieut. Joe Shimon, the wire-tapping cop, now being grilled for his part in tapping the wires of Howard Hughes and various others:

Lieutenant Shimon: "May I make a suggestion?"

Senator Pepper: "Yes, go ahead."

Shimon: "Will you check with Private McHale, Mr. Nolan and Danny Maher and have them go to Drew Pearson's office and get that file." (He referred to his own personal police file.)

Pepper: "Do you believe Mr. Pearson has it?"

Shimon: "I am beginning to suspect that from what I have been reading. Try it that way and you will get the file."

Wasted Money—It looks like Admiral W. M. Callaghan, the tough-talking head of the Navy's transport service, is going to duplicate a lot of shipping across the Pacific. Instead of using American shipping lines already in operation to Japan, the admiral has broken 41 troop transports out of mothballs. These will parallel American private shipping lines to which the United States government already pays a handsome subsidy. The American President Lines, for instance, is owned by Uncle Sam, yet its ships are running almost empty to Japan while Admiral Callaghan duplicates its service with Navy transports.

Real Foresight—The Taft people are really looking ahead. Already they are bidding for delegates at the 1952 GOP presidential convention. In order to corral New York's big fistful of delegates, Taft people sent $7000 to Albany to help the preconvention fight of Lieut. Gov. Joe Hanley to become Governor. They figure Joe will remember their generosity two years late . . . Incidentally, Democratic Governor Lausche of Ohio, who came out for Taft, now says privately that his man is slipping . . . Actually, the Ohio election may depend on a contested ruling of the Ohio Attorney general that illiterate voters are entitled to aid in marking their ballots. Taft's campaign manager, Willis B. Gradison, is worried—because thousands of Negroes who moved from the South during the war years will probably vote against Taft in view of his Dixiecrat flirtation.

GOP Tactics — GOP strategy to back war controls was cooked up at a closed-door meeting in the office of Indiana's Charlie Halleck. Believe it or not but the plan was unfolded by Representative Jesse Wolcott of Michigan, the man who led the fight to kill price controls in the Seventy-ninth Congress . . . Tip-off on the reasons behind Republican strategy may be found in the National Association of Manufacturers news letter, as follows: "Some Republican circles thought it would be well to support the Baruch plan to embarrass the Administration. The Republicans would have voted for the plan and expected the Administration to defeat it. Then, if prices had gone up, the Republicans could point to the fact that they had advocated the Baruch Plan."
